HOOVER SHOWS AID TO REVIVAL IN PUBLIC WORK

Governors Told by Radio 1930's Outlay Has Far Exceeded 1929.

$1,700,000,000 USED IN YEAR'S FIRST HALF

State Heads in Salt Lake City Reminded Need Still Exists.

OLD WAY OF MEETING DEPRESSION CITED

New Method, Says President Guarantee of Speedy Recuperation.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover said last night that public works construction during the first six months of the year totaled $1,700,000,000 exceeding by more than $200,000,000 the boom year of 1929.

In a radio address from his White House study to the Governors' Conference at Salt Lake City, the Chief Executive said the second half of the year "promises even greater results" and asserted that the "splendid endowment of our country of fortitude, courage, boundless energy and resources, together with the unity of effort is the guarantee of recuperation."

"To definitely organize so as to prevent the activity in public works from receding like other activities in depression, and to speed them up in anticipation of future needs so as to alleviate unemployment in such a time is a new experiment in our economic life of the first importance," Mr. Hoover said in thanking the governors for their cooperation following the stock market depression of last fall.

Old Viewpoint Cited.

"We have hitherto regarded great business depressions with their inevitable train of unemployment and hardships," the President said, "as an inevitable fever which must run its course, and in former times if public works were undertaken in alleviation of unemployment it has been in the sense of semicharity * * * had matters followed their previous course, we should during the past six months have undoubtedly seen a dimunition in volume of unemployment in public works over normal times but on this occasion we witness a large increase."

"The Department of Commerce informs me," Mr. Hoover continued,

Anslinger Slated For Narcotic Post

Aid Who Directed Offense on Rum Row Favored for New Position.

Harry J. Anslinger, assistant prohibition commissioner, is understood to be slated for the head of the new narcotics bureau to be set up in the Treasury Department under the Porter law.

Mr. Anslinger's position in the Prohibition Bureau expires today under the transfer of prohibition enforcement to the Department of Justice. His chief, Commissioner James M. Doran, becomes head of the Alcohol Permit Bureau in the Treasury.

The President is understood to have had under consideration for the narcotics bureau not only Mr. Anslinger but Dr. B. R. Rhees, deputy commissioner of prohibition, and Admiral Mark Bristol, retired. Anslinger's selection is expected, however. He has been in the prohibition service for several years and is credited largely with the breaking up of Rum Row, off the north Atlantic seaboard, a few years ago.

Calvin Coolidge

Says: We need more faith in ourselves. Largely because of some decline in trade we have set about finding fault with nearly everybody and everything. We are told the President is wrong, the Congress is wrong, the Supreme Court is wrong, and the Cabinet departments, the Federal Reserve Board, the chain stores, the power companies, the radio, and even the religious bodies, all are wrong.

Yet our Government, our physical properties and our industries have changed very little from a year or two ago when people were fairly content. We have the same country in charge of almost entirely the same people with substantially the same laws and administration. The most casual consideration shows us that this whole structure could not turn sour overnight. But our estimate of it has changed.

Our country, our people, our civil and religious institutions may not be perfect, but they are what we have made them. They are good enough so that it has been necessary to build a high exclusion law to prevent all the world from rushing in to possess them. My countrymen, it is time to stop criticizing and quarreling and begin sympathizing and helping.

DEBRIS ENDANGERS ENDURANCE FLIERS

Entering Twentieth Day in Air, Men Must Clear Clogged Controls.

KENNETH TO RISK LIFE

Chicago, June 30 (A.P.).—Their safety threatened by debris which has blown into the wires governing the rudder and stabilizer of their plane, John and Kenneth Hunter, new refueling endurance flying record holders, flew through the darkness tonight with one of the most dangerous tasks of their flight facing them tomorrow.

During the 169 refueling contacts, when gasoline, oil and food have been lowered to them, paper, string and other material have been torn from the end of the rope on which supplies were lowered and have become lodged about the wires, endangering the controls. To dislodge this material, Kenneth Hunter plans in the morning to climb out onto the roof of the hatch and let himself back with a rope to the tail of the ship. His position during this operation will be more perilous than that which he has had to assume frequently on the catwalk.

The men had been aloft more than 464 hours at midnight.

They had surpassed by a day and a half the old record of 420 hours 21½ minutes, established by Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine at St. Louis a year ago.

There was no indication as to when the new endurance champions would bring the City of Chicago down to land and luxury, bath and bounty, rest and riches. In frequent messages dropped to their ground crew and refueling partners, Walter and Albert, brothers of the two endurance pilots, the fliers said they intended at least to celebrate the Fourth of July in the air, and may be stay up longer if neither men nor machine give out.

The only complaint the endurance pilots made was a friendly rebuke to their sister and dietician, Irene Hunter, whose food they said was not "he-man enough." "Give us more hot dogs and hard boiled eggs," a note said, "and less of that fancy fixed duck and chicken."

During the afternoon the fliers and the refueling crew in Big Ben, sister ship of the endurance monoplane, established their 168th contact for fuel, food and messages, transferring 75 more gallons of gasoline to the City of Chicago. The contact was made after a note dropped by the air crew requesting more fuel. The note apparently contained another message, inasmuch as the ground crew delayed the refueling flight long enough to write a long reply, the

REALTY MAN FOUND BAKER MURDER GUN

Gave Weapon to Officers of County on Discovering It in Office.

BARRERE WAS IN HOUSE

The gun which fired the fatal shots into Mary Baker was retrieved by Herbert M. Campbell, Arlington County realty man, in his office at Oak Crest, Va. This weapon was found more than three weks ago in Campbell's office and furnishes one of the few tangible clews unearthed since the killing of the Navy Department clerk.

Campbell turned the weapon over to Arlington County authorities on May 24 or 31. He is not sure which date is correct. He told a Post reported last night that he had not seen the gun in more than eighteen months before its recovery.

Herman H. Barrere, long-sought suspect in the murder case, had access to his home and to the office prior to the recovery of the gun, according to Campbell.

On April 10, the day before the killing of the girl, Campbell said last night Barrere had gone to his home in Virginia Highlands to estimate a painting job on his house. On April 12, the day that her body was found near Arlington Cemetery, Barrere signed a contract to paint the Campbell home.

Four days later Barrere was arrested on a charge of larceny of property from the Campbell home and was subsequently released when Campbell withdrew the charge. Meanwhile, Campbell said, he had not missed the gun, which was later identified by ballistics experts as the one which killed the Baker girl.

After Campbell had withdrawn the larceny charges against Barrere, the latter appeared at his office in Oak Crest on the night of April 23. The north window was open and the screen was removed. The door was also open. Barrere came to workmen who were preparing Campbell's miniature golf course, near to the office. He told them that Campbell was a "white fellow" for withdrawing the larceny charge.

Whether Barrere placed the gun in the unused desk at this time has not been determined by police. This is one of the strong points that prompted their exhaustive search for him.

Campbell said last night that he had known Barrere for more than a year, and that he had access both to the Campbell office and home because of the painting contract. Campbell, who had never missed the 32-caliber gun, opened the unused desk in his office in the latter part of May. The last time that he saw

PENSION RATE BOOST LIKELY BY SENATORS

Amendment May Raise House $20 Figure to $60 Monthly.

VETO HELD ASSURED IF INCREASE IS VOTED

Action on Disapproval by Hoover of Spanish War Bill Cited.

ROBSION DRAWS FIRE OF DEMOCRATIC SIDE

Opposition Taunts Kentucky Member About Stand on Legislation.

By CARLISLE BARGERON

The Senate yesterday seemed bent upon giving President Hoover and the House more trouble on veterans' legislation. Indications were that today it will adopt the Walsh-Connally amendment boosting pensions in the House bill from $20 to $60 per month, and reducing disability which a veteran must have to get the minimum pension, from 25 per cent to 10 per cent.

The President has indicated to callers, it is understood, that he would veto such rates, so if the Senate adopts them it means another test of strength with the House, with adjournment resting in the balance. House conferees would probably reject the Senate amendments, whereupon, presumably, there would be a demand for a vote on them in the House, and if they were finally adopted by both houses they would have to wait around until the President acted upon the measure.

Inasmuch as the House overrode the President's veto of the Spanish War veterans' bill, carrying the $20 to $60 pension range, it would seem that leaders will have a hard time holding it in line against the same rates for the World War veterans.

Possible Justification Seen.

A possible justification which may influence House members to remain with the President was given by Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, yesterday. It is that Spanish War veterans were 22 years getting their pensions, while the World War veterans are now to get theirs within twelve years and therefore can not expect so much at the start.

Senator Reed gave estimates by Director Hines, of the Veterans' Bureau, of the cost of the Walsh-Connally amendment. It will cost $58,000,000 the first year, as compared with the $31,000,000 estimated cost of the House bill or the $12 to $40 pension range, and the fifth year will cost $167,000,000 annually as compared with $82,000,000 for the House bill.

Senators Barkley, of Kentucky, and Connally, of Texas, promptly referred to the $200,000,000 Treasury surplus reported in Monday morning's newspapers after there had been so many predictions of a deficit.

Adjournment Not Settled.

There is no telling how the matter will finally come out, but adjournment does not seem to be immediately in sight, despite optimistic

CITY GOVERNMENT TO GO ON UNDER OLD FINANCIAL PLAN; HOUSE ACTS IN EMERGENCY

Continuing Resolution in Sum of $9,000,000 Is Sent to Senate.

COMMITTEE OFFICE TO BE FIGHT SCENE

Meeting Set for Today But No Sign of Truce Is Evident Yet.

ONLY TWICE BEFORE HAS MEASURE DIED

Speedy Relief Legislation Saved Situation in 1890 and 1916.

The bitter fight over the $44,000,000 District appropriation bill will shift to the office of the Senate appropriations committee this afternoon, and the prospect is that when the committee has acted the battle will go on with even greater intensity. As yet there is not the remotest sign of a truce.

The committee meets at 2:30 o'clock to consider the emergency resolution that was adopted by the House yesterday. This measure would continue so much of the current appropriation as is needed for the city's running expenses.

Like the House version of the big appropriation bill, however, it calls for a Federal contribution toward the city's expenses of $9,000,000.

Approval Not Expected.

For this reason, the Senate is not expected to approve the emergency resolution in the form it passed the House yesterday. The senators do not think a $9,000,000 contribution is fair, and they are unwilling that it go through either in the regular bill or in a continuing resolution.

And so the prospect is that today the Senate appropriations committee will amend the resolution, write into it a provision for a larger contribution, perhaps $12,000,000, the sum it wrote into the regular bill, or perhaps $10,000,000, the sum it finally offered as a compromise in order to save the bill.

If the resolution should be amended and adopted by the Senate, it necessarily would have to go to the House, and thence to Senate and House conference for a settlement on the amendment. Thus the controversy that has the big bill deadlocked would be started all over again.

City Starts Year "Broke."

Today, for the first time in history, the municipality starts on a fiscal year technically "broke." True, it has money in the Treasury, but this it may not use until Congress grants it authority to use it.

The authority is contained in two measures—the deadlocked bill appropriating $44,000,000 to run the city for the 1931 fiscal year, and the emergency resolution which would continue about $33,000,000 of the current appropriation.

The continuing appropriation was adopted by the House yesterday by a vote of 182 to 3. This overwhelm-

Reno, Nev., June 30 (A.P.).—Mrs. Eugenia Bankhead Hoyt Butt, daughter of Representative W. B. Bankhead, of Alabama, was granted an annulment of her marriage to Wilfred Dawson Butt here today and announced she would be married tomorrow night to Howard Lee, of Dallas, Tex., an aviator.

The annulment was not contested by Butt, a former University of Nevada student. Both had been divorced prior to their marriage here some months ago. On their honeymoon to Hawaii, Mrs. Butt said she learned that Butt had not received his final decree of divorce in Los Angeles and she left him.

"I am sure this will be my last trip to Reno—for business reasons," Mrs. Butt told reporters today. "I will Commissioners Send Out Order to Use 1930 Law as Basis.

CAPITAL WILL BEGIN FISCAL YEAR TODAY

Few Are to Lose Jobs But None Can Be Paid Till Congress Moves.

PER DIEM EMPLOYES TO BE STRUCK FIRST

Auditor Expresses Opinion Scheme Agreed Upon Is Legal.

City, in Need of Funds, Possesses $10,000,000

Although the District government entered on its new fiscal year today technically "broke" because of the failure of Congress to enact an appropriation law for the new year, it occupies a unique financial position among the large cities of the world.

To begin with, it is free of debt. Not only is it free of debt, but it has a surplus of funds accumulated in past years, an additional surplus accumulated in the last fiscal year which ended yesterday, and has around $3,000,000 which it has set up as a cash operating fund to pay its way from the beginning of the fiscal year until revenues start to roll in in large volume later in the year.

Altogether, A. R. Pilkerton, acting auditor of the District, estimates that the District has in the keeping of the Federal Treasury close to $10,000,000 free and unattached, but which it may not touch except when and in the manner Congress says.

The District government shall continue to function in the new fiscal year, beginning today on the basis of the 1930 appropriation act providing for operating expenses and maintenance, the District Commissioners ruled yesterday.

The decision of the Commissioners was put into a formal order, to be distributed to all department heads this morning. The order was announced late in the afternoon after the Commissioners had gone over the situation confronting the District because of the failure of Congress to enact an appropriation bill for the current fiscal year or to enact other legislation which would authorize the Commissioners to contract obligations against the public funds.

The formal order will be construed "liberally" by the department heads, Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, president of the Board of Commissioners, said.

Few to Be Out of Work.

Under its provisions few if any men or women now on the District pay rolls will be put out of work, although it is true that none will get any pay until Congress provides funds.

Between 2,000 and 3,000 per diem employes will be the first to be affected. Their first payless pay day will come one week from today. They are paid by departmental groups, and all, together with the employes on the statutory rolls, will have had at least one payless pay day by July 15 unless Congress acts in the meantime.

The Commissioners adopted their formal order that municipal functions shall continue after a conference with A. R. Pilkerton, acting auditor of the District, who submitted an opinion that because of the unusual situation such an order would be construed as legal, although there is a specific prohibition in law against incurring public obligations

Man Kills Wife, Self In Row Over Alimony

Makes Good Boast Never to Pay $80 Monthly Ordered by Court.

MRS. BLANCHE CRADDOCK.

Rather than pay $80 monthly alimony to his estranged wife, Charles R. Craddock, 54 years old, a Southern Railway engineer, yesterday slew his wife and then took his own life in the apartment of Mrs. Craddock's sisters in the Monmouth Hotel, G street near Nineteenth street northwest.

Craddock appeared at the apartment early yesterday afternoon to make good his boast, made in the morning in an Alexandria court, that he would never pay the alimony. Mrs. Blanche R. Craddock, 36, his wife, responded to a knock on the door.

Miss Ella Marshall, Mrs. Craddock's sister, heard her scream, "Goodness, you." The husband and wife went into a living room, when Miss Marshall heard them violently quarreling. Mrs. Craddock shouted, "Get the police."

"Police, police!" her husband sneered. Miss Marshall became terrified and started for the door as Craddock grabbed his wife and threw her to the floor of a hallway and pumped bullets into her body.

Miss C. Tyler, who conducts a beauty parlor in the next apartment, heard the shots. As she reached the door, Miss Marshall ran past her shrieking hysterically, "He shot! He shot her!"

Miss Tyler entered the apartment with two workmen, who had also heard the shots. Craddock stood in the living room and fired two shots into his chest. In his hand was clutched a hank of hair

Craddock died almost instantly. His wife was taken from the place by policemen who had been summoned by workmen. She died on the way to Emergency Hospital.

New York, June 30—(N.Y.W.N.S.)—Maurice Campbell, New York prohibition administrator for three years, retired today under fire that did not hold a candle to the intensity with which he declared that Treasury officials were not sincere in their efforts to enforce the law, that political aspirations prevent enforcement in the city, and that as a result he now publicly advocates repeal of the eighteenth amendment "before the Nation is consumed in the fire of its consequences."

Andrew McCampbell arrived in the city tonight to take over tomorrow the job that his predecessor called impossible. He came amid a fanfare of statements in which prohi-for which funds have not been provided.

Legal authorities of the staff of Comptroller General McCarl were consulted by Mr. Pilkerton before he submitted his opinion to the Commissioners and, in view of this fact an adverse opinion by the comptroller general is not expected to upset the program decided on by the District heads.

Action of the Commissioners, however, will not solve the difficulties confronting municipal officials because of the lack of the annual appropriation bill. Even if the Senate agreed to the proposal of the House and approved the House continuing resolution, plans for public works will be thrown helter-skelter.

Only maintenance and operating expenses will be incurred and "all improvements and new works" called for in the pending 1931 appropriation bill will be abandoned until Congress enacts the bill.

Similar Situation in 1912.

Discussing the failure of the appropriation act prior to the beginning of the new fiscal year, Mr. Pilkerton, in his memorandum to the Commissioners, said: "There is only one alternative, and that is that activities which are considered necessary for the protection of life and property, health and sanitation, government agencies which depend entirely for their support upon public funds, will have to be continued and limited to necessities in that respect on the basis of the preceding act.

"This is a novel situation which occurred in one of the branches of the Federal Government in 1912, and which, I am advised, continued for a period of five days on the foregoing basis.

"In so far as the continuing resolutions approved in prior years for the operations of the government are concerned they do not serve any useful purposes in the situation with which we are now confronted, as they operated merely to continue the activities under a former appropriation act."

Improvements Total $14,000,000.

The "betterments and improvements" provided for in the 1931 appropriation bill as passed by the House, but which may not be done under the Commissioners' order of yesterday, were items totaling $14,410,455, according to a table submitted to the Commissioners by Mr. Pilkerton.

Among these were street and road improvement and repair amounting to $3,250,000; Connecticut Avenue Bridge over Klingle Valley, $250,000; replacement of Monroe Street Viaduct, $135,000; main and pipe sewers, $210,000; extension of the suburban sewer system to keep pace with growth of the city, $675,000; sewers for which property owners would be assessed to pay the costs, $285,000; work on the upper Potomac interceptor, $50,000, and many other items.

It will not be possible to buy the new Fire Department apparatus and to make certain changes for which $188,000 was carried in the bill, and the workhouse and reformatory will not have the $362,500 needed for improvements and repairs and other things.

School Construction Halted.

No school sites may be purchased nor may any new school buildings be constructed. The pending appropriation act provided $3,240,000 for buildings and grounds and $360,700 for new sites.

The Water Department will perhaps be hardest hit. It is working under the handicap of too little funds and the pending bill provides for an increase in water rates to provide needed additional revenues and $507,000 for works which will not be available until Congress acts.

Difficulties arising from the delay in the appropriating moneys for these works will not be ended by enactment of the appropriation bill in a week or two. The working season for much of the work is limited to the spring and summer months and may not be prolonged into the cold weather. It is the practice of District officials to save a part of their annual appropriations for outside work such as street repairs, sewers and extension of the water system for use in the spring, prior to the ending of the fiscal year, and to continue the work throughout the summer out of funds carried in the appropriation bill for the following year.

DISTRICT FUND FATE IN HANDS OF SENATE

Continuing Resolution Sent to It by House Calls for $9,000,000.

GROUP TO MEET TODAY

ing vote, however, is not an index as to how the House feels on the question of a Federal contribution. Many who agree with the Senate voted for the resolution, feeling that it was an emergency matter that had nothing to do with the question of how much Uncle Sam should provide in the big bill.

Senate May Act Today.

The House then sent the resolution over to the Senate. There, on the motion of Senator Bingham (Republican), of Connecticut, it was referred to the Senate appropriations committee.

Senator Jones (Republican), of Washington, chairman of the appropriations committee, announced that the resolution would be considered at a meeting at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

A search of the records at the District Building yesterday showed that only twice before has the appropriation bill failed, in 1890 and in 1916. On both occasions, however, a continuing resolution was adopted before the fiscal year set in.

If the continuing resolution is adopted this time, hundreds of men will be thrown out of employment for the reason that the resolution does not take care of new building projects. These will have to be halted for a year.

Senate Figure Urged.

Before the House took up the resolution yesterday, the House District committee, by a unanimous vote, instructed Representative Hall (Republican), of Indiana, to present a resolution urging that the Senate demand for a $10,000,000 Federal contribution be accepted.

Representative Robert G. Simmons (Republican), of Nebraska, chief House conferee on the deadlocked appropriation bill, told the House later that he and his fellow conferees had made a proposition to the Senate conferees, but that so far it has neither been accepted nor rejected.

The plan was, he said, to let the appropriation bill go through carrying a $9,000,000 Federal contribution, with the understanding that the conferees come back here in November and make a thorough study of the fiscal relations problem. If it should be concluded then that $9,000,000 is not enough, an additional sum could be carried in a deficiency bill to make up the difference.

The senators say that this simply would continue the controversy, which the conferees now are engaged in.

Plight of Jobless Pointed Out.

In yesterday's debate Representative Hall, of Indiana, pointed out that if the continuing resolution is adopted, thousands of men will be thrown out of work. Mr. Simmons replied that the resolution is designed to make certain that the pay roll for all essential activities here shall be continued while the larger bill is pending.

Agreeing with Representative Freer (Republican), of Wisconsin, that local citizens escape many of the taxes that are paid in the States, Mr. Simmons said that he proposed to offer a resolution that would bring about an investigation of that matter.

Mr. Hall suggested that perhaps the resolution to continue the current appropriation could be so amended as to take care of new projects and thus head off unemployment.

"It would be futile to add that in the continuing resolution," said Mr. Simmons, "because then you would be making a second appropriation bill when there is one in conference.

Would Care for Essentials.

"The purpose of this resolution is to enable, beginning tomorrow, the payment of the salaries of all essential activities in the District of Columbia so that the functions of the Government may continue. Then we can continue, as I hope we may, with the consideration of the District appropriation bill."

Representative Stafford (Republican), of Wisconsin, said that he thought the compromise plan of the Senate, which agreed to accept a $10,000,000 contribution after originally asked for $12,000,000, was fair and ought to be accepted.

Mr. Stafford was the first of the Treasury watch dogs in the House to desert the Simmons-Cramton faction.

Representative Bowman (Republican), of West Virginia, declared that the present method whereby a lump sum of $9,000,000 is contributed by the Government every year is a clear defiance of the statutory law of 1923, which provides that the expenses of the city shall be borne on a 60-40 basis.

Increased Needs Seen.

Certainly, he said, if $9,000,000 was enough five years ago when the total appropriation was about $30,000,000, it could not be fair now that the total is $44,000,000.

The House conferees, Mr. Bowman said, did not go into the conference with the Senate conferees with any idea of compromising.

"They have been stubborn," he declared, "and they have blocked the orderly procedure of this House. This is the reason I am opposing the resolution."

Representative Cramton (Republican), of Michigan, author of the $9,000,000 lump sum plan, defended that plan and declared it was approved by the House by a 20-to-1 vote.

He accused the House District committee of smothering his resolution to make the $9,000,000 the statutory law in place of the 60-40 law.

Lump Sum Attacked.

Representative Hall said that the lump sum policy was indefensible. Representative Patterson (Democrat), of Mississippi, agreed with him.

Mr. Cramton said that the purpose of the lump sum was to make it possible to increase local appropriations for needed improvements without putting a heavier burden on the Federal Treasury.

Representative Moore (Democrat) of Virginia, criticized Minority Leader Garner for his recent statement in which he accused the Senate of bluffing, and urged on the House to call its bluff. Such language, he said, was an affront to the Senate and militated against an agreement.

The Senate District committee yesterday met but took no action on the various resolutions creating commissions to settle the fiscal relations problem.

President Hoover again was represented as feeling confident that, in the end, the appropriation bill will be passed.

PRESIDENT GREETS ATLANTIC FLIERS

Henry Miller Service.

SUSPECT CAPTURED IN LINGLE SLAYING

Alleged Accomplice and Nine Companions Are Taken in Raid.

TWO GANGSTERS KILLED

Chicago, Ill., June 30 (A.P.).—Grover Dullard, suspected of complicity in the slaying of Alfred (Jake) Lingle, together with nine companions, was arrested by detectives from the State attorney's office, who raided two Moran gang gathering places late today.

Dullard was formerly connected with the Sheridan-Wave gambling resort in which Lingle, Julius (Potatoes) Kauffman and Joe Josepha were said by investigators to have been interested.

Dullard, according to information upon which the State attorney's office acted, was at the Hotel Sherman when Lingle entered there the afternoon of June 9, a short time before he was killed.

When Lingle left the lunch counter there, according to investigators, Dullard either joined him or trailed him. Between the hotel and the Illinois Central subway under Michigan avenue, where the assassination occurred, Dullard was joined by a "short, swarthy man," who was walking with the reporter when he was killed.

Dullard, investigators said, was known to have carried a short .38-caliber revolver, such as was carefully left near the body by the slayer.

If, as the prosecutor's office theorizes, Dullard did not fire the shot, he possibly passed the weapon to the slayer somewhere between the hotel and the subway, it is said.

Dullard was taken by raiders as he walked into an office in a downtown building where a number of Moran followers were conferring. None of the men offered resistance beyond attempting to make away with a heavy ledger. The book was retrieved after it had been thrown from a window and was found to contain 150 names —supposedly the pay roll of George (Bugs) Moran.

The other Moran raid was made at a room in a North Shore hotel. Names of those taken were not given out.

Both groups were rushed to the State's attorney's office, where suspects were questioned behind closed doors. Chief Investigator Pat Roche refused to disclose results of the questioning, but it was understood that a number of witnesses to the Lingle slaying were sent for to view the suspects.

The raids followed close on two new gangland deaths—those of Michale Gillitchio, alias Frank Pitello, and an unidentified man, apparently an Italian. Gillitchio's body, shot nine times, was found on a lonely road near McCook, a western suburb. His hand clutched a nickel, gangland's symbol of "cheap."

Only 17 years old, the victim had been in the racket for two years, and was affiliated with "Red" Bolton's West Side mob, a "Capone subsidiary." Previously he had been a member of the "42" gang, composed of young hoodlums from the near South Side Italian district. He had been beer runner and hijacker and, as usual in these killings, there were abundant motives for his slaying.

The unidentified Italian was found near Kentland, Ind. He had been shot five times and apparently dumped out of an automobile.

Congress to Present Lindbergh Medal Soon

(Associated Press.)

Arrangements for the presentation to Charles A. Lindbergh of the medal awarded to him by Congress are about complete.

REFUELING NONSTOP PLANE KEEPS FLYING

nature of which was not made known.

The ground crew said the contact was in no respect an emergency refueling, although a similar contact had been made only three hours previously. Since the disabling of one of the endurance plane's fuel tanks two days ago, the refueling task has arisen more often. Pilots of both planes, however, seemed to meet the contingencies without added trouble.

The endurance plane, a rebuilt Stinson Detroiter, with a 300-horsepower Wright Whirlwind motor, has flown approximately 34,000 miles in this nineteen-day test, the pilots averaging about 75 miles an hour as they keep circling above the airport.

The four Hunter brothers, whose home is in Sparta, Ill., a small downstate town, took up flying about six years ago, saving their funds as coal miners and farm hands in order to buy their airplanes. Their whole family is now at the airport, looking on as they fly to new fame and fortune.

SENATE WIDENS LIST FOR TARIFF INQUIRY

Pig Iron and Sugar Added to Articles Submitted to Commission.

INVOKE FLEXIBLE PLAN

(Associated Press.)

Less than two weeks after enactment of the new tariff law the Senate yesterday added sugar and pig iron to the score of commodities it has asked the tariff commission to investigate under the flexible provisions to determine whether the rates actually equalize differences in production costs here and abroad.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, proposed a resolution to direct the inquiry into the new duty on Cuban raw sugar. It was adopted without debate after approval had been given an amendment by Senator Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, adding pig iron for investigation.

The duty on Cuban raw sugar was raised from 1.76 to 2 cents by the new law. That on pig iron was left unchanged at $1.125 a ton. Senator Reed losing an amendment to raise it to $1.50, the duty recommended by the finance committee.

Under the resolution the commission would report its findings as early as practicable.

The New Yorker's proposal also asks inquiries into costs of production of umbrellas and ultramarine blues. Approval had been given earlier to a resolution by Senator Hebert (Republican), Rhode Island, directing an inquiry into the rate on shoe lacings.

At the same time Representative Celler (Democrat), New York, introduced a resolution seeking an inquiry into the cost of production of pipes, pipe bowls, cigarette holders and miscellaneous smokers articles.

Proposals by Senators Borah, Idaho, and Bingham, Connecticut, both Republicans, authorizing investigation of a score of products, including cement, furniture, shoes, agricultural implements, bells, wire fencing and wire netting, were approved more than a year ago.

Luhring, Cox Reported Favorably to Senate

Nominations of Oscar R. Luhring and Joseph W. Cox to be associate justices of the District Supreme Court were favorably reported yesterday by the Senate judiciary committee and are expected to be confirmed at the next executive session of the Senate.

The men were selected by President Hoover for the additional judgeships created in a law recently enacted by Congress. Another law was enacted at the time providing two additional judgeships for the local Court of Appeals, but thus far these have not been filled.

FLIERS OF ATLANTIC GREETED IN CAPITAL

PRESENTED AT CAPITOL

Express and several New York newspapermen. The big plane was piloted by Maj. E. Bertrandias, of the Reserve Corps.

On his departure, Capt. Kingsford-Smith was mystified over the disappearance of a letter of greeting from President Cosgrave of the Irish Free State to President Hoover, which he had brought in the Southern Cross. He said he had given the letter to "someone" in New York with the understanding that it would be transmitted to President Hoover. When the White House made public that the missive had not been received, it was assumed that it had fallen prey to a souvenir hunter.

As Capt. Kingsford-Smith stepped from the plane before a madly cheering crowd, controlled with difficulty by police, the Army Band played "God Save the King," while Army officers stood at salute. He was followed by his copilot, Evert Van Dyk; Capt. J. Patrick Saul, navigator of the Southern Cross, and John W. Stannage, radio operator.

Diplomats and officials who welcomed the party included F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War for Aeronautics; Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the Army Air Corps; David S. Ingalls, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aeronautics; Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics; Capt. Ernest Clark, commandant of Bolling Field, and secretaries of the British Embassy and the Irish and Netherlands Legations.

After making a short talk for the sound movies, in which he expressed his appreciation for the reception accorded him, Capt. Kingsford-Smith introduced his companions on the globe-circling Southern Cross.

The leader and Capt. Stannage were then taken to the British Embassy in Ambassador Ronald Lindsay's car. Capt. Saul went to the Irish Free State Legation, and Mr. Van Dyk to the Netherlands Legation.

Prior to the White House luncheon, President Hoover received the fliers in the blue room, disappointing a large crowd gathered in front of the executive offices, where the reception was expected to take place.

Capt. Kingsford-Smith is understood to have told the President that he would take off from New York Wednesday morning for Oakland, Calif., the starting point of his around-the-world-flight.

Capt. Saul transmitted to the President a message of good will from President Cosgrave of the Irish Free State.

Guests at the White House luncheon were Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador; Kingsford-Smith, Radio Operator Stannage, Capt. Saul, Copilot Van Dyk, J. H. Van Royen, Minister of the Netherlands; William J. B. Macauly, in charge of affairs of the Irish Free State; George Akerson, one of the President's secretaries; William R. Castle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State; Assistant War Secretary Davison, Assistant Navy Secretary Ingalls, Rear Admiral Moffett, Maj. Gen. Fechet, Wing Comdr. L. J. E. Twisleton-Wykeham-Fiennes, aviation attache of the British Embassy; Col. Rickenbacker, Edmund L. Zacher, Capt. Charles R. Train and Col. Campbell B. Hodges, naval and military aids, respectivey, to the President; Lieut. John E. Upston and Lieut. Stanhope C. Ring.

Following the luncheon the fliers went to the Capitol and were introduced to the House and the Senate before going directly to Bolling Field for the return flight to New York.

The big Fokker was met over Baltimore yesterday morning and escorted into Washington by three pursuit planes from Bolling Field. The four planes circled the Capitol and the White House before landing.

Congress Adopts Salary Bill Report

Measure to Give $2,875,000 to Federal Workers to Go to Hoover Next.

The conference report on the Brookhart-Lehlbach salary bill was adopted by both the Senate and House yesterday, so that now the bill is ready to go to the White House for the President's signature.

The bill, which is designed to take care of employes who were slighted under the Welch act of 1928 by giving them the raises Congress intended they should get, will distribute about $2,875,000 in increases among 45,000 Government workers, about 15,000 of them in Washington.

As finally passed, the bill does not make the raises retroactive. Had a retroactive provision remained in the bill it would have cost about $3,000,000 more.

Pittsburgh, June 30 (A.P.).—A death caused by heat was reported here today as the temperature reached almost 90 degrees. Michael Sigella, 32 years old, collapsed and died while mowing grass at his home in Willock, a suburb.

DRY ENFORCEMENT SHIFT COMPLETED

Justice Department Will Direct Work of 2,700 Added Employes.

SENATE TO TIGHTEN LAW

(Associated Press.)

While the Treasury bundled up its prohibition enforcement problems yesterday for delivery to the Department of Justice last night at midnight, the Senate was pumping new life into law enforcement commission proposals for tightening up the dry laws.

A last-minute drive for enactment of the commission's legislative program was undertaken, with the judiciary committee agreeing to meet today in special session to consider the measures already approved by the House.

Meanwhile, the Senate and House became deadlocked over the appropriations for continuing the commission's general survey through another year. House conferees on the second deficiency appropriation bill refused to accept the $50,000 limitation on funds for the commission and the stipulation that its activities be confined solely to a prohibition study.

Chairman Wood, of the House appropriations committee, said an effort would be made in the House to vote into the bill the $250,000 requested by President Hoover for continuing the general investigation of law enforcement.

Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, who sponsored the amendment voted by the Senate restricting the commission to $50,000, immediately countered with the assertion that any increase in the fund by the House would be subject to a point of order in the Senate.

Three prohibition bills probably will be reported to the Senate today by the judiciary committee, but there was slight hope last night of enactment of them at this session. The measures provide for modification of the new Jones law by relieving first offenders of the severer penalties, for waivers of jury trials to hasten up court action, and define petty offenses.

There was every indication last night that the Senate would adjourn by tomorrow or Thursday at the latest. Chairman Norris of the judiciary committee is prepared to seek early action on the bills, but leaders realize that any serious objection at this late hour will block action.

The transfer of prohibition enforcement last night will take 2,700 employes of the Treasury to the Department of Justice. Of these, 1,700 are prohibition agents who will concentrate upon large-scale violations. The Treasury, however, will retain control of industrial alcohol and medicinal liquor.

New Senate Term May Begin Monday

Hoover Indicates He Will Let Members Have Week-End Off.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover apparently is going to give the weary Senate a Fourth of July holiday before calling the special session for consideration of the London naval treaty. It was intimated at the White House yesterday that if Congress adjourns by tomorrow night or Thursday the President will issue the call for the special session to convene on Monday.

Some treaty advocates in the Senate have insisted that Mr. Hoover call the Senate back into session the day after adjournment, fearing many members would not return once they had left the city.

The treaty issue has become involved somewhat in the adjournment plans. The opposition to the pact is insistent that it be laid over until November. If the Senate fails to have a quorum on hand at any time a move will be made for a recess until November.

Vivisection Bill Is Given Approval

Measure Making Practice Illegal Reported by Committee.

A bill to prohibit vivisection on dogs in the District of Columbia was favorably reported by the House District committee yesterday. A subcommittee previously had disapproved the bill.

The measure, which is a sort of model bill for the country, has the backing of antivivisection societies in all parts of the country, and these societies have sent persons here to work for its passage.

The Senate District committee held hearings on the bill, but at this time there is no indication that it will take action on the measure.

Eastman New Member Of Bicentennial Group

(Associated Press.)

George K. Eastman, of Rochester, N. Y., head of the Eastman Kodak Co., was appointed yesterday by President Hoover as a member of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

He succeeds Hanford MacNider, of Iowa, who has been named Minister to Canada. The Bicentennial Commission is arranging plans for the George Washington celebration in 1932.

We do not claim that the smart, clean uniforms of our delivery men, or their courteous manners, add anything to the value of American Ice, but customers tell us that it is pleasant to have such men serve them. Lawyer Jailed on Refusal To Defend Texas Attacker

Port Arthur Attorney Declines to Accept Assignment of Court After Girl Identifies Man Threatened by Mob as Her Assailant.

Beaumont, Tex., June 30 (A.P.).—Because he refused to accept the assignment of the Criminal District Court to defend Rainey Williams, held in jail here on several charges of criminal assault, R. J. Jernigan, Port Arthur attorney, today was fined $250 and remanded to jail for contempt of court by Judge R. L. Murry.

Jernigan's refusal came after the Negro, three times threatened by a mob in as many days, had been identified by a Port Arthur girl as her assailant.

The girl's story, told to County Attorney Marvin Scurlock, paved the way for the filing of a seventh charge against the Negro, already indicted for six felonies for his alleged attacks on couples parked in automobiles on highways near Port Arthur.

The Negro's trial on one of the charges has been set for Wednesday.

Sheriff W. W. Covington and his deputies today continued to guard the jail after mobs had been repulsed Friday and Saturday nights. The prisoner was rushed to the jail here from Port Arthur Friday to evade a mob which was forming at the city jail there.

RETURN OF BRANDEIS TO ZION FOLD VOTED

Action at Cleveland Session Insures His Resumption of Group's Leadership.

JEWISH AGENCY LAUDED

Cleveland, Ohio, June 30 (A.P.).—Return of Louis D. Brandeis, Justice of the United States Supreme Court, to active participation in affairs of the Zionist Organization of America nine years after he withdrew as its head because his policies were rejected, was assured tonight when the thirty-third annual convention voted to accept his offer to take part in guiding its affairs.

Appointment of H. C[illegible], acting high commissioner in Pal[illegible]tine during the riots last Augst, as British representative before the League of Nations permanent mandate commission was criticized in an address at the convention today by Morris Rothenberg, vice president.

Rothenberg said it was "a matter of great disappointment that Mr. Luke, who was charged with delinquency during the riots," should have been appointed to report to the mandate commission on behalf of the Palestine government.

He said results of negotiations of the Jewish agency with the British to bring about the substantial carrying out by the mandatory government of its obligations with regard to establishment of the Jewish national home up to this time "are far from satisfactory."

Premier Ramsay MacDonald, in a recent visit to the United States, expressed deep symathy with the work and achievements in Palestine "and with the deep concern of the Jews of America over the carrying out of the spirit of the mandate," Rothenberg said.

"It was with great consternation that we noted that the government of which he is the head has since that meeting given the impression that it has not been carrying out the spirit of the mandate," he said.

He praised the Jewish agency, which was formed last August in Zurich, Switzerland, to unite Zionists and non-Zionists the world over to build up Palestine.

Rothenberg revealed that Mr. and Mrs. Felix Warburg, of New York, Jewish philanthropists, had participated in advancing $850,000 toward the $6,000,000 goal which is sought for the Jewish home.

SENATOR SMOOT SAYS HE IS SOON TO WED

Mrs. Sheets offered any suggestion as to the exact date, friends of the couple said they would be married soon as Mr. Smoot has expected for some time to start for the islands on July 19.

The names of Mrs. Sheets and the Utah statesman, who is chairman of the Senate finance committee, were first linked together early this spring while she was visiting in Washington. They were seen together several times and the senator was very attentive toward her, friends said.

Mr. Smoot returned here Saturday from Washington for a rest following more than a year of intensive work on the new tariff bill. He had previously planned a pleasure trip to Honolulu.

Mr. Smoot's wife died more than a year ago in Washington. Mrs. Sheets, widow of Edwin S. Sheets, a bishop in the Latter Day Saints Church, who died in 1918, has been active in church and social affairs here for many years.

The marriage ceremony will be performed in the Latter Day Saints' Temple here, Mr. Smoot being an apostle of that denomination.

CHEMIST DIES

DR. HARVEY W. WILEY.

DR. WILEY FUNERAL SET FOR TOMORROW

Noted U. S. Chemist Dies as Result of Recent Heart Attack.

ESPOUSED HEALTH BILLS

Funeral services for Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief chemist of the Department of Agriculture for almost 30 years and famous pure food exponent, who died early yesterday morning, will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Vermont Avenue Christian Church. The Rev. Earle Wilfley, pastor of the church, will officiate. Interment will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Dr. Wiley had been in ill health for the last few months, having suffered a severe heart attack while testifying recently before the Senate agriculture committee. The outstanding accomplishment of his career was the fight which resulted in enactment of the pure food and drug acts. His appearance before the Senate committee was in connection with this measure.

Born in Kent, Ind., 86 years ago, Dr. Wiley received his education at Hanover College in Indiana, the Indiana Medical College and received degrees from Harvard and Vermont. He began his career as professor of Latin and Greek at Butler College, Indianapolis, turned to the teaching of scientific subjects and, in 1883, was appointed chief chemist in the Department of Agriculture.

During his 30 years as chief chemist of the Department of Agriculture Dr. Wiley was the center of several bitter wrangles, centering around the "what is whisky" campaign in 1907 and, later, "the battle of benzoate soda." Finally, in 1912, he resigned and devoted the remainder of his active career to contributing to a national monthly magazine.

Dr. Wiley published his autobiography last spring, in which he tells of the struggles leading up to the successful fight for the enactment of a pure food and drug act. He was also the author of several other books, including "Songs of Agricultural Chemists"; "Foods and Their Adulterations", "Principles and Practices of Agricultural Chemistry" and "Not by Bread Alone."

Although an invalid during the last eight months, Dr. Wiley's interest in pure food and health regulations never diminished. His mind was alert up to the time of his death. He had been confined to his home at 2345 Ashmead place since June 4, when he attended a directors meeting of the Washington Loan & Trust Company.

At the age of 67, Dr. Wiley married Miss Anna C. Kelton, a Government worker. He is survived by her and two sons, Harvey W. and John Preston Wiley. The latter son, at the time of Dr. Wiley's death, was in Indianapolis preparing to take a physical examination for the Naval Academy. The other son and Mrs. Wiley were at the bedside when Dr. Wiley died.

The body will lie in state at the Vermont Avenue Christian Church for three hours preceding the service tomorrow.

House Makes Available Policemen Pay Increase

A resolution to make immediately available the pay raises for policemen and firemen granted in the Capper-Zihlman bill was adopted by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate.

Unless the District appropriation bill or an emergency resolution continuing the current appropriation bill are enacted, however, the resolution approved yesterday is worthless.

FRENCH LEAVE RHINE AS GERMANS CHEER

Midnight Celebration Part of Joyous Program When Occupation Ends.

HOMES MADE AVAILABLE

Mayence, Germany, June 30 (A.P.).—A liberated Rhineland from which the last French soldier of occupation had departed tonight proceeded to celebrate its new freedom.

Quietly, with precision that had characterized its every action since military rule was imposed by 125,000 allied trooped, more than eleven years and seven months ago, the last 1,000 troops in horizon blue rode away today.

Occupation of the German Rhineland, an area of 24,547 square miles with between 7,000,000 and 8,000,000 population, officially ended at noon. Scarcely had the remnant of France's army turned its back upon this post and Wiesbaden when German flags began to flutter where the tricolor had waved so long in the breeze.

Midnight Celebration Held.

Rhinelanders who felt the full force of the dislocation of their civilian lives, while German statesmanship adjusted itself to the new policy of peace, prepared to celebrate at midnight, with all Germany, in a manner not known to oppressed peoples since Armistice Day, 1918.

Thousands who lived in Mayence watched the last trainload of soldiers vanishing westward. They recalled the early years of occupation when for months at a time, even such commonplace conveniences as mail, telephone and telegraph were nonexistant and there was so little freedom of movement for civilians that Rhinelanders found themselves placed under arrest for playing their national anthem on the pianos in their own homes.

Those who cheered loudest for the departing soldiers, however, were the approximately 10,000 citizens who had been waiting months, even years, for a place to live.

5,000 Homes Made Available.

Final evacuation of the garrison of this city meant to them that more than 5,000 dwellings, with 25,000 rooms, were available for Germans whose names were on a long list of would-be renters. To these Rhinelanders today was indeed a big national holiday.

On the whole, little fuss was made over the departing troops, the French went out in three trainloads of 1,000 officers and men. As the last train pulled away there was scattered cheering from the crowd, which watched on a bridge over the tracks and on one edge of the station platform.

Some sang Deutschland songs, but the populace was not disposed to hold an immediate celebration. A few flags went aloft here and there but by general agreement most of the inhabitants awaited the marching in of Hessian police this afternoon before breaking out the national colors.

People Pour Into Streets.

As the green-coated Hessian marched over the bridge and into the city with the blaring of bands, the national and the Hessian colors were run up everywhere and the populace poured out of homes into the streets.

Apparently every man, woman and child who could walk was out to greet the new police force from the Fatherland. eople cheered, aviators did stunts overhead above the Rhine, and drivers of automobiles made a deafening noise with sirens and horns.

The first thing the Hessian police saw at the Mayence end of the bridge was the black, red and gold flag of the German republic rising over what for a dozen years had been the headquarters of the French army of occupation.

Von Hindenburg Honors Patriots.

Berlin, June 30 (A.P.).—A proclamation to the German people on the final evacuation of the Rhineland by foreign troops was issued tonight by President von Hindenburg and the German government.

"After long years of hardships and waiting, the demand of all Germans was today fulfilled.

"Loyalty to the fatherland, patient perseverance and common sacrifices have restored to the occupied territory the highest possession of every people—freedom.

"Our first thought is due today to those who gave their lives for the fatherland's freedom, among whom are included those who during the hard years of occupation became the victims of their love for their country.

Homeless Are Remembered.

"Men and women who during the long oppressive period of affliction suffered mentally and physically for Germany, and many thousands who through arbitrary foreign rule were driven from house and home, all are deserving of our undying gratitude."

After communicating "heartfelt greetings to our German brothers in the Saar district," whose nationality will ultimately be decided by a plebiscite, the proclamation states that "though clouds continue to threaten the political and economic existence of Germany, today is an occasion for hopefulness.

"After years of bitter distress, after the acceptance of oppressive burdens, we have regained for the Rhineland a freedom that we shall preserve for the welfare and future of our fatherland.

"Therefore, in this solemn hour, let us be united in the pledge 'Deutschland ueber alles.'"

The proclamation was signed by President von Hindenburg, Chancellor Heinrich Bruen and all the members of the cabinet.

BAKER GUN FOUND BY REALTY DEALER

the gun was in a bureau in his home.

Campbell is positive that he did not bring the gun to his office and is equally sure that it was not removed there by any of his associates. When he located the gun he turned it over to Sheriff Howard R. Fields, of Arlington County, he said.

Because of the coincidences of Barrere's visit to the Campbell home on April 10, the day of the murder, his alleged larceny of the goods a few days later, and his appearance at the Campbell office prior to the recovery of the murder gun, authorities are particularly anxious to question him.

Sheriff Field turned the gun over to Inspector William S. Shelby, who had tests made at the Bureau of Standards by ballistics experts. While all guns are machine made and bear the same lathe traces, it was pointed out by the expert, all gun barrels are reamed by hand and each leaves a distinctive trace of the bullet.

Text of Hoover's Speech To Governors' Conference.

(Associated Press.)

In a radio speech to the governors' conference at Salt Lake City from his study in the White House, President Hoover said:

"It gives me great pleasure to greet this twenty-second annual conference of governors. I especially welcome the opportunity at this time to express my appreciation for the cooperation that the governors and their associates in county and municipal affairs have given to me in organizing the expansion of public works to alleviate the unemployment which has resulted from the stock market crash of last November.

"The request for such cooperation which I issued to the governors and mayors at the end of November last met not only with immediate hearty assurances from almost all State officials, but has been followed by action productive of most important results. I feel that some report of the results of that cooperative effort is not only of interest, but is due to your body.

Act Is New Experiment.

"To definitely organize so as to prevent the activity in public works from receding like other activities in depression, and to speed them up in anticipation of future needs so as to alleviate unemployment in such a time, is a new experiment in our economic life of the first importance, and the success which has attended this effort, the enlarged understanding of its vital importance, the new paths of organization which it has opened, represent an advance in economic thought in government and in service to our people.

"We have hitherto regarded great business depressions with their inevitable train of unemployment and hardships as an inevitable fever which must run its course, and in former times if public works were undertaken in alleviation of unemployment it has been in the sense of semicharity. This time the Nation has realized that as a sound economic policy that prudent expedition of construction could be to an important degree used as a balance wheel to maintain security of employment, to maintain consumption of goods, to thus contribute to economic stability and above all to relieve hardship.

First Results Discernible.

"We have since the first of January a full six months of organized effort from which we can begin to appraise results. In all previous depressions, the volume of public works has diminished because the State and municipal governments, feeling the effects of such depression in taxes, in problems of finance, and in the general psychology of retrenchment, have themselves followed the general trend. In the great depressions of 1908 and 1921 we witnessed such a decrease in public works. Had matters followed their previous course, we should during the past six months have undoubtedly seen a diminution in volume of employment in public works over normal times, but on this occasion we witness a large increase.

"The Department of Commerce informs me that the totals expended or contracted for in new public works and betterments by National, State and local governments in these last six months have not been less than $1,700,000,000 and that this exceeds even the boom year of 1929 by over $200,000,000 and the organized effort to which you have contributed so much in creation will, I am confident, go still further in its accomplishments. It takes time to plan public works, to legislate, to finance them, to assemble materials, to enter contracts so that the second half of the year promises even greater results. Particularly is this true for our Federal appropriations and our plans for roads, buildings, ships, and other Federal improvements are much enlarged in our fiscal year beginning today.

Business Aid Acknowledged.

"Nor should I omit reference to the effort of our utilities and our leading business concerns to cooperate with us in the increase of construction. They have shown courageous faith in the future and their expansion of employment which they have provided in construction and betterment works exceeds even the $200,000,000 of increase over 1929 accomplished by the public authorities.

"I am happy to say that this cooperation of efforts of all branches of the Government, State, local and Federal, are still continuing.

"We have every need for continued serious effort. We are pioneering a new path for the future which shall add to the orderly progress of the Nation. Every dollar of work we provide now adds to the security of the home in this time of stress. It adds courage and hope in time of adversity. Renewed resolutions for even further effort in every State and every community, and in the Federal Government, will add faith in early recovery.

"The splendid endowment of our country of fortitude, courage, boldless energy and resources, together with unity of effort, is the guarantee of recuperation. To that unity of action your members have made notable contribution."

HOOVER TELLS GOVERNORS HOW PUBLIC WORKS AID REVIVAL

SENATE LIKELY TO INCREASE RATES IN PENSION BILL TODAY

hopes of Republican leaders to quit tomorrow. A Senate vote should come on the veterans bill today.

In the meantime, senatorial nerves have about come to the breaking point.

Senator Robsion, Kentucky Republican, ventured into a calm Democratic discussion of the bill yesterday with the suggestion that the Democrats had not done as much as they could have for veterans when they had the opportunity back in 1917. Thirty minutes later he was lying exhausted in his seat, red of face, starry eyed and wondering what had struck him.

Democrats Attack Him.

At least six Democrats jumped on him at once. He was pelted all over his body. He referred to the $30 compensation voted to the disabled veterans in 1917 when the Democrats were in power and wanted to know if Senators Connally, Barkley, McKellar and Caraway had not voted for this small amount.

"I rise to inquire of these senators if they voted for it?" he shouted.

Mr. Connally was momentarily taken back but he then pulled his Texas frame up to its full stature and started to make reply when Mr Robsion shouted again:

"The actual facts are that all four voted for the bill limiting to $30 a month the compensation for total disability in line of service."

By now Senators Caraway, McKellar, Glass, and Barkley were all on their feet, and Mr. Connally's anger was aroused. He tried to speak and Mr. Robsion kept shouting at him.

"Of course, I voted for that bill. It was either that or nothing," Mr. Connally shouted, then he appealed to Senator Allen who was in the chair to make Senator Robsion keep quiet so he could answer. Mr. Allen only looked at him and grinned.

"Mr. President," shouted Senator Connally, "I demand that you enforce the rules against Republicans as well as Democrats."

Mr. Allen continued to grin.

Mr. Robsion insisted that the Democrats had the votes at the time to pass any kind of bill they desired.

Mr. Caraway got up, started a shaft and then shrugged his shoulders in disgust.

Statement by Barkley.

Mr. Barkley shouted that this $30 compensation was the first time the country had ever given its veterans any disability compensation at all.

Mr. Connally now came back with his second wind and tore into Mr Robsion with a narrative of the Veterans' Bureau scandals. As soon as the Republican administration came into power it "plunged its arm up to the elbow in graft and theft and corruption," he shouted, refusing to let Mr. Robsion speak.

"You brought this on yourself," he shouted.

"Yes, his crowd practically stole the hospitals out from under the veterans," shouted Senator Glass.

"Yes," agreed Mr. Connally, "the senator from Kentucky says he would have voted for a larger sum than $30 a month. And now 12 years later he wants to give them $12 a month.

Robsion Is Criticized.

"Only a few weeks ago he voted to give the civil employes of the Government, those who have been living off the Government all their lives, a pension. But if a war veteran is flat on his back—three-fourths dead—he is now willing to give him $40 a month and if he is only reasonably crippled up he will give him $12."

When Mr. Robsion tried to interrupt, Mr. Connally shouted that he would not yield until he got ready, whereupon Mr. Caraway observed:

"He won't be here then," referring to what is believed to be Mr. Robsion's impending defeat for reelection.

Mr. Robsion was hopelessly submerged in abuse and invective when Mr. Connally got through with him.

Longworth Hears Debate.

Speaker Longworth sat through another exchange between Senators Glass and Reed over the question of whether House members knew what was in the bill. Mr. Reed had said the House would not accept the increased rates.

Mr. Glass wanted to know how the House members could know what was in the bill after 20 minutes' consideration of it when "we won't know yet."

As Mr. Longworth walked out of the chamber he bowed profoundly to Glass and the latter waved to him.

STATE ISSUES LAID BEFORE GOVERNORS

Heads of Commonwealths or Their Representatives Open Parley.

HOOVER HEARD ON AIR

Salt Lake City, Utah, June 30 (A.P.).—With 28 governors or their representatives present, the twenty-second annual national governors' conference met here today for a three-day discussion of their most pressing problems.

From Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York they heard today a discussion of the present unemployment situation and the prediction that unemployment and old age insurance, financed by the workers themselves in cooperation with the States, must come.

Gov. W. M. G. Conley of West Virginia told of a gross sales tax in his State, which he said has produced in the eight years of its operation a total of $24,874,827.

Western State's Plight.

Gov. Frank C. Emerson of Wyoming, pleading the case of the eleven Western public States, asked sympathetic consideration of the problems arising from the fact that more than a fourth of the area of these States is owned by the Federal Government and thus exempt from State taxation.

From Gov. George H. Dern of Utah as chairman of the executive committee they received a proposal of the committee for the establishment of a permanent information bureau for the interchange of help in solving problems of State government. A national foundation, Gov Dern announced, has signified its readiness to finance such a bureau until it has demonstrated its practicability.

Gov. Roosevelt received informal mention as a prospective Democratic nominee for the Presidency when Mayor Bowman after pleading for law enforcement and support of President Hoover's efforts in that regard bespoke the same cooperation for the New York executive should he be named by the Democratic party and elected chief executive of the nation.

Radio Hour Provided.

The governors tonight and the members of their parties were guests of Sons of the American Revolution at a banquet, the program for which included an hours' national broadcast over the Columbia system, and during which President Hoover addressed them from Washington. State executives present were also given an opportunity to voice a brief greeting to the people of their respective States.

More extensive addresses were delivered by Gov. Roosevelt, Gov. Theodore Christianson of Minnesota and Gov. C. C. Young of California.

be married tomorrow night to Mr. Lee, and he's a dear. We will fly back to Los Angeles and then to Dallas. You know, I'm learning aviation and I hope to have the control sticks part of our flight back."

When wedding bells ring out again tonight for Mrs. Eugenia Bankhead Hoyt Butt, the widely known Alabama beauty, prominent in Capital social circles, will rival the oft-married Peggy Hopkins Joyce in trips to the altar.

The daughter of Representative W. B. Bankhead, of Alabama, and granddaughter of former Senator J. H. Bankhead, differs from the celebrated Peggy, however, in having been wed twice to her first husband, Morton Hoyt, son of the socially prominent Mrs. Henry M. Hoyt, of this city, widow of the Solicitor General in President Taft's administration.

She was divorced from Mr. Hoyt in Reno on April 4, 1928, and remarried him in New York City the following December. Their romance went on the rocks again and in exactly one year Reno again witnessed their divorce action.

Three days after receiving her decree, she was married in Reno to Wilfred Pawsen Butt, whom she met while he was clerking in a drug store while working his way through the University of Nevada. Their nuptials attracted considerable attention. On their honeymoon in Honolulu, she suddenly left him.

Annulment of her marriage in Reno yesterday cleared the way for hel latest marital venture—which is her fourth.

Language Department Head at Georgetown Was Cited in World War.

STUDENTS GIVE BLOOD

Jean J. Labat, head of the modern languages department at Georgetown University and recipient of high honors from three foreign governments, died yesterday morning at Emergency Hospital of intestinal trouble following an operation for appendicitis five weeks ago. Transfusions had been performed with blood volunteered by students in the university's school of foreign service in a vain effort to save him.

Blood had been accepted from Elmer Bourgerie, James Powers, George Griffin and Henry Trautwein. They will be pallbearers with Leslie Mayer, Raymond Trainor, Jack McFall and Leo Hogan.

He was widely known here, having served on the university staff for the last eight years after having received the degree of bachelor of arts and master of arts there in studies after the close of the World War, in which he distinguished himself.

Born in France 41 years ago, he received his education in two colleges there, and at the outbreak of the World War he joined the French infantry as a private. Notable service during three years at the front, in which he was wounded several times, won him a lieutenancy for gallantry under fire, the Croix de Guerre and the Polish War Cross. He likewise was detailed to the French High Commission in the United States and while here aided in Liberty loan drives and in recruiting for the Polish army.

After the signing of the armistice, Mr. Labat served the French Embassy here as assistant military attache, later becoming an American citizen. For his work in aiding international relations and as an educator, he was decorated by the Roumanian government with the rank of officer in the Order of the Star of Roumania. He also was an officer in the French Academy. He served as official interpreter for a number of international parleys here, including the International Parliamentary Union and the conference on aeronautics.

He is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Marie Stewart, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Stewart, of this city, and a son, Stewart Labat. They live at 1634 Riggs place northwest.

Drowning Victim's Body Is Recovered

Marine Sergeant's Remains Found 50 Feet From Canal Bank.

The body of Sergt. Charles R. Dray, 22 years old, instructor at the Marine Barracks, was recovered from the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal at Widewater yesterday. The man was drowned while swimming with friends Sunday.

Sergt. Dray's body was recovered by Policeman Joseph Oldfield, of the Bethesda substation, and Charles Benson, a boatman at Widewater. Search for the man began Sunday afternoon and lasted until dark. At daybreak yesterday morning it was resumed. The body was taken to Pumphrey's undertaking establishment at Rockville. It was turned over to Marine authorities last night.

The man was an excellent swimmer, and the body was found only 50 feet off shore. There were no marks on the body to show that he had struck a submerged rock. When the man sank, though, the nearby shore was crowded with people, no one heard him cry out and for this reason there was doubt for a while that he had drowned.

Two Apartment Permits Sought

Cost of New Structures Put at $550,000 for Both in Applications.

Applications for building permits involving $550,000 worth of apartment construction were filed yesterday with the office of District Building Inspector Oehmann by the Cafritz Construction Co., and the Westchester Development Corporation.

The Cafritz project is an eight-story concrete and brick apartment building to be constructed at 2000 Connecticut avenue northwest at an estimated cost of $350,000. It will be 155 feet wide, approximately 150 deep, 90 feet high and containing 130 apartments.

The Westchester Building will be five stories, of brick and concrete, 197 feet wide, 124 feet deep, 60 feet high and will be in square 1815 on Cathedral avenue. Its estimated cost is listed at $200,000 and it will comprise 60 apartments. Harvey W. Warwick is the architect for both structures.

Two Policemen Face Demotions

Accused of Attending Party When They Were Due on Beats.

Charged with attending a party in Takoma Park at a time when they should have been patrolling specified beats on their motorcycles, two policemen of the Traffic Bureau were ordered before the Police Trial Board by Maj. Henry G. Pratt, superintendent of police, yesterday.

Meanwhile Maj. Pratt recommended to the District Commissioner the demotion of both men. This will mean a reduction in pay of $120 a year each, and for that reason must, under the law, be passed on by the Commissioners.

The police chief recommended that Policeman K. P. Greenlow be sent to the Third Precinct as a foot patrolman, and Policeman G. M. Patton be sent to the Fourteenth Precinct for foot patrol duty there. Formal charges are under preparation against the two policemen.

Ocker Searchers Scan Rail Tickets

Action Taken Upon News That Coast Guardsman Has Slips.

A careful check of railroad ticket records was being made last night in an effort to trace the movements of Joseph C. Ocker, Detroit Coast Guard employe, who is reported to be on his way to Washington to "wipe out" the Coast Guard headquarters here.

This action was taken when it was revealed yesterday that Ocker had in his possession a book of Government transportation-request slips at the time he shot his sister and assaulted his wife with the butt of his pistol in his sister's home in Detroit last Friday night.

In the possibility that Ocker may have fled in his automobile to some point outside of Detroit and entrained from there, railroad records are being examined in various towns and cities to see if the fugitive may have signed the green slips in exchange for a ticket, and if so, to what destination the transportation was issued.

SOUND ADVICE!

When tempted to over-indulge
"Reach for a Lucky instead"

"Coming events cast their shadows before"

Be moderate—be moderate in all things, even in smoking. Avoid that future shadow* by avoiding over-indulgence, if you would maintain that modern, ever-youthful figure. "Reach for a Lucky instead."

Lucky Strike, the finest Cigarette you ever smoked, made of the finest tobacco—The Cream of the Crop—"IT'S TOASTED." Lucky Strike has an extra, secret heating process. Everyone knows that heat purifies and so 20,679 physicians say that Luckies are less irritating to your throat.

"It's toasted"

Your Throat Protection—against irritation—against cough.

*"I have come to the conclusion," writes Sir Henry Thompson, M.D., F.R.S., "that more than half the disease that embitters human life is due to avoidable errors in diet." We do not represent that smoking Lucky Strike Cigarettes will bring modern figures or cause the reduction of flesh. We do declare that when tempted to do yourself too well, if you will "Reach for a Lucky instead," you will thus avoid over-indulgence in things that cause excess weight and, by avoiding over-indulgence, maintain a modern, graceful form.

CRITIC OF WILHELM NOW ABSOLVES HIM

Poultney Bigelow Returns After Three-Weeks' Stay at Doorn.

KAISER GIVEN PRAISE

New York, June 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—While the question of who won the war is still a matter of popular difference of opinion, Poultney Bigelow returned from Europe today aboard the Atlantic Transport liner Minnewaska, with his own convictions on who did not start it.

Since boyhood, he has been a close friend of the former Kaiser Wilhelm II. After several years of writing, which described the kaiser as the instigator and cause of the war's debacle, Mr. Bigelow arrived at the conclusion that the former German ruler was not responsible.

Kaiser Wilhelm, he said, after a visit of three weeks at Doorn as the kaiser's guest, is willing and would welcome trial by an international court-martial to fix his responsibility for starting the war.

Friendship Began Long Ago.

The friendship between the former kaiser and Mr. Bigelow—who is now 75 years old—began when the kaiser was a 14-year-old prince. It lasted until the World War. Then Mr. Bigelow began to attack his former friend bitterly. However, three days of conversation and splitting wood at Doorn changed all that and now reconciliation is complete.

"Here is a man," Mr. Bigelow said, "who has been straight and honest and conscientious for the 60 years I have known him, and then, suddenly, you find a large portion of the world calls him a liar and a coward. It is difficult to have an individual judgment in the face of such feeling and emotion. I only repeat now what I know. It would be disloyal if I lied about it.

Blame Can Not Be Placed.

"If you spent 75 years in reading history, you would realize that you can not determine exactly who started the war. There were too many forces and factors involved. Who started the Spanish-American War? McKinley said he did not. No one knows who blew up the Maine.

"You can rake German history with a fine-tooth comb," he continued, "and you will not find an example of a monarch who kept peace so long as Wilhelm II. He gave to Germany in those days a prosperity unequaled by any other country in the world, with the exception of the United States."

Man Who Gave Matches To Monkeys Arrested

New Orleans, La., June 30 (A.P.).—Blistered monkey paws had become a source of worry to the keeper of Audubon Park Zoo.

"Maybe it's the heat," thought the keeper—until today.

Sidney Hampton, 25, was arrested when discovered passing lighted matches to the monkeys.

War Nurse, Cleric Denied Citizenship, Win on Appeal

Dr. MacIntosh, Yale Professor, Who Would Not Aid in Unjust Combat, and Miss Bland, Refusing to Bear Arms, Held Justified.

New York, June 30 (A.P.).—Douglas Clyde MacIntosh, theology professor at Yale, and Marie Averill Bland, Canadian World War nurse, both of whom refused to take the oath to bear arms in defense of the United States, won a reversal today in the United States District Court of Appeals of the decision of the lower courts which denied them citizenship.

Dr. MacIntosh, applying for citizenship in the Federal district court in Connecticut, refused to take the oath because, he said, he would not bear arms if he believed the war to be in an unjust cause.

Miss Bland, who cared for shell-shocked soldiers in France, declared that under no circumstances would she bear arms in any war. She said she could not do so because she did not believe it would be consistent with Christianity. Miss Bland, the daughter of a Canadian Episcopal clergyman, now lives in New York.

Reviewing the circumstances which brought about the rejection of Dr. MacIntosh, Martin T. Manton, presiding judge of the circuit court of appeals, wrote:

"It appears that the appellant stated that he was ready to give to the United States, in return for citizenship, all the allegiance he had ever given or could give to any country, but that he could not put allegiance for the government of any country before allegiance to the will of God.

"There is a distinction between a morally justified and an unjustified war as recognized in international law. Recognition was given to such distinction in the recent Kellogg pact. It strongly lies in the desire to maintain peace and abolish war."

Two Children File $50,000 Law Suits

Charge They Were Walking on Sidewalk When Hit by Woman's Auto.

Two children who were struck down and injured by an automobile Sunday yesterday appeared as litigants in damage suits filed in District Supreme Court, in which each asks for $50,000.

The children are Evelyn M. Ferrell and Audrey Garren, who are suing through their respective fathers, William C. Ferrell, of 57 Rhode Island avenue northwest, and Ralph H. Garren, of 37 Rhode Island avenue northwest. Both actions are brought against Elizabeth M. Wewer, whose address is not given.

Each suit charges that the children were walking along the sidewalk at Rhode Island avenue at First street when the woman's automobile careened on to the walk and hit them. Negligence on the part of the woman is charged. Attorney Philip Rosenfeld appears for the two plaintiffs.

Watch Smuggling Inquiry Demanded

14 Companies Charged With Making False Entries by House Member.

(Associated Press.)

An investigation by the House ways and means committee into activities of an alleged ring of watch smugglers was proposed in a resolution introduced yesterday by Representative Reid (Republican), Illinois.

"The investigation," Mr. Reid said in a statement, "is the outgrowth of a campaign recently conducted by the Justice Department which unearthed a criminal plot to flood the American market illegally with more than $1,000,000 worth of watches." In his resolution Mr. Reid presented a record of court and departmental action affecting 33 persons indicted for watch smuggling and 14 companies charged with violating the customs laws by making false entries.

"The fourteen companies," the statement said, "include widely known corporations, the principal one of which undervalued about $250,000 worth of watches, and upon being apprehended paid the Government $52,000 in mitigation of the penalty prescribed by law."

The resolution said Federal District Attorney Tuttle in New York recently disclosed that two Government appraisers had accepted bribes of $8,000 to smuggle watch parts worth a million dollars into this country within the past year.

BLAME FOR MALTA ROW DENIED BY PIUS

Pope Creates Five Cardinals at Secret Consistory in Vatican City.

SACRED JUBILEE ENDS

Vatican City, June 30 (A.P.).—Pope Pius today brought to a close his sacerdotal jubilee with a round of activities which included the raising of five men to the cardinalate, a denial of the church's responsibility for distirbances in Malta and denunciation of proselying activities in the City of Rome.

His Holiness held a secret consistory today at which three Italians, a French prelate and a Brazilian received the high rank of princes of the church.

The non-Italians were Archbishop da Silveira, Cintra, of Rio de Janeiro, and Bishop Leinart, of Lille, France. The Italians were Mgr. Marchetti-Selvaggiani, secretary of the congregation for the propagation of the faith, former papal auditor at Washington; Mgr. Raffaelo Rossi, assessor of the consistorial congregation, and Mgr. Serafini, secretary of the congregation of the council.

63 Cardinals at Present.

A further honor to come to the Italian trio will be membership in the curia, which carries on the administrative business of the church. The cardinalate now consists of 31 Italians and 32 of other nations.

Announcement was made that 3,175 pilgrims from North America, in 21 pilgrimages, visited the Pontiff during his jubilee, which began last year and ended tonight. Latin America sent 600.

The Osservatore Romano figures included 543 pilgrimages in all, with 126,992 members, 78,290 being from Italy, 44,143 from Europe other than Italy, 562 from Africa, and 152 from Asia. These statistics gave an exceedingly clear picture of the strenuous program his holiness has maintained during the last twelve months.

In an allocution, opening the secret consistory today, the pontiff surveyed the situation of the Catholic Church, particularly in Rome. He said that Protestant proselyting in Rome must be combatted by an increase in the number of parish priests to serve the outlying quarters of the city.

Maltese Situation Reviewed.

Referring to the Maltese situation, his holiness styled it the most serious question before him. He laid down three principles, the first of which denied that troubles in Malta had been aroused by the Holy See or officials of the Catholic Church in the Island. He said the return of peace, "notwithstanding our sincere effective desire and the desire of the episcopacy itself, has been rendered impossible by persons, actions and facts independent of our will—indeed, contrary to our will because contrary to the interests of the Catholic religion."

The pontiff further asserted, "At no time has our intervention and that of the Maltese episcopacy wished to enter the political field."

The pontiff deplored the religious persecutions in Russia and exhorted the cardinals to continue the crusade of prayer. He ordered special prayers to be said at the end of every mass.

The final audiences of the Pope's extended jubilee year were to Vatican officials, employes and servants who presented the pontiff with a portrait of his brother, Count Fermo Ratti, who died six months ago.

American Imports Show Sharp Slump

Value of Shipments Drops to Lowest Point Since 1922, Says Report.

Values of American imports in the first quarter this year touched the lowest point in any similar period since 1922, according to the foreign commerce department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States which attributes this condition to low world prices.

Many imports show increases ranging up to as high as 327 per cent in quantity, the chamber reports, 31 out of 82 principal imports showing gains. The decline in values, it is pointed out, did not apply to the whole list of imports, 15 of 50 chief imports accounting for 30 per cent of the total value of imports, showing gains.

Substantial losses in quantity were shown, among other items, in imports of tin, raw wool, crude petroleum, raw tobacco, raw cotton, meats, wheat and diamonds. These imports also showed declines in value, with the exception of diamonds.

FOREIGN LEGATIONS IN BOLIVIA GUARDED

Deposed Officials Flee to Missions for Protection From Insurgents.

U. S. TEACHER INJURED

La Paz, June 30 (A.P.).—The military directorate governing Bolivia since the successful revolution last week tonight posted troops about the Brazilian, German and Chilean legations to protect officers of the former regime from angry crowds.

Dr. Hernando Siles, who resigned last month as president but was accused of plotting to regain that office, took refuge in the Brazilian legation after the revolt broke. Gen. Hans Kundt, German chief of staff of the Bolivian army, who was accused not only of aiding Dr. Siles, but of Prussianizing Bolivian forces, fled to the German legation. Several cabinet officers of the former administration obtained shelter with the Chilean diplomats.

After it became known yesterday that the revolt had been successful, great crowds began demonstrating and sought to obtain custody of the hidden officials. They were particularly noisy in front of the Brazilian legation, demanding that the minister of Brazil turn Dr. Siles over to the processes of common justice and shouting that the former president had been a tyrant.

Meanwhile, with their revolution achieved, officers of the junta began plans to restore the republic to its normal condition and to mend its financial structure.

Gen. Galindo and Col. Oscar Mariaca Pando, his chief associate, said Bolivia already was on the way to normality, that communication lines had been reopened and that the political situation was tranquil.

(Associated Press.)

The State Department continued yesterday to keep informed on events in Bolivia, but the official attitude remained undefined.

Frederick P. Hibbard, charge of the legation at LaPaz, cabled that Walter I. Gholz, an American teacher in the American Institute, had been slightly wounded by machine gun fire last Wednesday, but that no other Americans had been hurt and no American property destroyed.

Fighting occurred around the American Legation, Mr. Hibbard said, but no political refugees found haven there because troops surrounded it at all times.

You can actually feel this lather routing out the impurities in your pores—those hidden accumulations that so often are the cause of blackheads and pimples. Rinse with both warm and cold water, gradually letting it cool till it is almost icy. This astringent treatment will close the pores and keep your skin safe from dirt and germs. That is the treatment advised by more than 23,000 world-famous beauty experts today—experts whose business it is to know what is best, experts who have studied for years the best methods of protecting facial beauty. They find Palmolive best because it is a pure vegetable oil soap, untouched by artificial coloring methods, with a delicate odor that makes the addition of heavy perfumes unnecessary.

Try Palmolive tomorrow. Use it for the bath as well as the face. It costs no more than ordinary soap, you know. And the results will delight you.

ENDING WITH A SURPLUS.

The fact that the Nation ended the fiscal year with a surplus unofficially estimated at around $200,000,000 is gratifying. It does not serve, however, to mitigate the concern of the taxpayer over the outlook for the coming year. Tax payments from incomes derived in 1929, the first three quarters of which were periods of boom prosperity, were chiefly responsible for the large Government revenues that made possible the surplus. Thus far in 1930, however, business has been somewhat depressed; consequently the Treasury has good reason to be apprehensive regarding prospects for the immediate future.

To add to the Treasury's troubles is the fact that this has been a profligate Congress. Appropriation bills enacted in the present session which are to be paid in the 1931 fiscal year amount to an estimated $4,500,000,000, a sum in excess of anticipated revenues. The surplus, of course, will be available to apply against any possible deficit, but when appropriations are figured in billions, a surplus amounting to a mere $200,000,000 does not cut much of a figure.

However, the Nation has faced deficits before. Through rigid economy and careful husbandry the Treasury of recent years has been able to avoid finishing the year in the red. Taxpayers have implicit faith in the ability of Secretary Mellon to guide the country through a difficult financial year if one should materialize.

PROHIBITION'S NEW ERA.

Today marks the beginning of a new era in the administration and enforcement of the national prohibition act and the Harrison narcotic law. Until today, a single bureau of the Treasury was charged with the administration of the law to prevent the manufacture and sale of alcohol for beverage purposes and the regulations for controlling the manufacture and distribution of industrial alcohol as well as the laws having to do with the manufacture, importation and sale of narcotic drugs. While the three sets of laws are related closely, it is believed that better results in the matter of enforcement will be obtained by dividing the responsibility, and it is along the line of divided responsibility that the new era is inaugurated today.

Following the selection of Dr. James M. Doran as chief of the Bureau of Prohibition of the Treasury, the civil service laws were extended to apply to its personnel. Every enforcement officer who was unable to pass the tests for fitness required by the Civil Service Commission was separated from the service and no new appointments were made except following rigid inquiry into the character and fitness of the applicant. As a result of the more rigid requirements that have prevailed under Dr. Doran's administration, the Prohibition Bureau today turns over to the Department of Justice a force of employes which for character and efficiency compares favorably with any similar organization in the Government service.

Dr. Doran henceforward will have sole control over the manufacture, withdrawal and sale of industrial alcohol. During his term as chief of the Prohibition Bureau the diversion of alcohol has been reduced to a negligible point. Dr. Doran's retention as chief of the agency regulating industrial alcohol bears the commendation of those legitimately engaged in the distillation of the product and of the chemical industry at large.

Enforcement of the narcotic laws, under an act framed by the late Representative Porter, today becomes the duty of a separate bureau in the Treasury, the chief of which has not yet been selected. When he is appointed, however, he will find ready for action an efficient force fully familiar with all phases of the problem of narcotic regulation and control.

CROP DIVERSIFICATION.

While Chairman Legge and the Federal Farm Board are endeavoring to bring the wheat growers of the West to a realization of the necessity for balancing wheat production more nearly with demand, Gov. Gardner of North Carolina issues an explanation of how the loss in the return from principal money crops of the Tarheel State was partially recovered.

The loss of $43,000,000 in the annual production value of the two principal crops, cotton and tobacco, from 1927 to 1929 "represented a staggering blow," says Gov. Gardner. "North Carolina felt it. It feels it now. But it was not a knockout."

When the value of her principal crops decreased North Carolina learned that there were other crops to be recovered from her soil. The "live-at-home" idea was spread into every community. The State administration, aided by the newspapers, the farm organizations and the department of education, started a propaganda campaign for the use of certified seeds and the breeding of pure-blooded live stock. Manufacturing and processing of raw materials and diversification of crops followed and within two years $30,000,000 of the loss in cash returns from agriculture was recovered.

"The live-at-home idea is not a fad," says Gov. Gardner. "We have already got out of the sentimental stage of talking about it. Already its results are coming to be apparent. The most important tangible result, of course, is the planting of a much larger acreage of food and feed stuffs by all classes of farmers in all sections of the State. This has been done especially in the East."

North Carolina has long been recognized industrially as one of the most progressive of the Southern States. Now she is raising her own food and profiting thereby.

DR. HARVEY W. WILEY.

In 1883, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley embarked upon a career of public service that was subsequently to familiarize his name in every household of the country. Forty-seven years ago, food manufacturers were restricted only by their consciences as to how they would prepare their product, how they would preserve it and what details of the processing they would divulge to the public through the label. As a result, the public was regularly exploited and its health was endangered. It was Dr. Wiley who, when he became chief chemist of the Government agency that was later to become the Department of Agriculture, first realized the necessity for public regulation of the preparation of foods and drugs and who sounded the tocsin that led, in 1906, to the enactment of the food and drugs act under which the consuming public is assured of the purity of its foods and drugs and the honesty of the label by which they are identified.

Dr. Wiley was a crusader. His attacks upon food and drug manufacturers led them to bring great political pressure to bear demanding his resignation. From the inception of the pure foods movement Dr. Wiley was constantly under fire, but he fought vigorously on for his principles until 1912 when, following an official expression of confidence in his work by President Taft, he resigned because of "irreconcilable" differences with his superiors and the consciousness of an "essentially inhospitable" official environment. He then turned to magazine writing, a field in which his influence for pure and unadulterated foods was extended many fold.

Dr. Wiley's death yesterday morning marked the passing of a character who profoundly influenced American living conditions. As a result of his labors, the span of life of the American people has been lengthened and their well-being enhanced. Dr. Wiley earned the respect of his fellow men. In death they honor his memory.

FORCE AND CUNNING.

Joseph Stalin, the Russian dictator, is seldom so candid as he was in his seven-hour address before the Communist party in Moscow. The Soviet government usually denies its responsibility for the Bolshevist propaganda that is broadcast throughout the world. But in his recent pronouncement Stalin virtually accepts the responsibility for trying to convert the world to bolshevism. He makes it plain that the Communists intend to continue their activities unabated.

That small group in control of Russian affairs has determined to exterminate the more prosperous class of peasants, to destroy religion, to make all Russians slaves of the government, and to extend this system to all other nations. Stalin speaks of the establishment of a dictatorship of the proletariat throughout the world. Apparently he understands that it is no longer possible to deceive other nations as to the actual purpose of the Soviet government. The proletarian czars who have Russia in their grasp hoped to secure recognition by the United States and other nations without relinquishing their attempts to stir up revolution within those countries. Stalin now seems to consider that cause hopeless and comes out in public defense of the program to communize the world.

The statement that the bolshevist government is ready to pay the foreign debts accumulated during the regime of the czars may be regarded as bait thrown out to hook the gullible. Stalin says the Soviets are willing to pay part of the debts if the creditor nations will advance credit to the dictatorship. Apparently he has in mind the claims of foreign corporations, but under any circumstances the offer is ridiculous. The Moscow government is obligated to pay the debts of the former regime without any consideration from the creditor countries. Stalin's offer is an obvious attempt to get more capital from the so-called capitalist nations with which to aid the movement for their overthrow. No one will be deceived by it. The Moscow regime has proven itself unworthy of trust. It is the avowed enemy of all other governments.

Stalin is pretending before the Russian people that other nations are building elaborate fences around themselves to keep Bolshevist influence out. At the same time he has to resort to drastic measures to force communism upon the Russians. The Bolshevist doctrine is a disease that infects disgruntled elements in all countries, but it depends upon deceit or slavery for establishment on a large scale. The Soviet regime is relying upon force at home and cunning abroad for the dissemination of its preposterous theories. All its diplomacy is aimed at world revolution. It is entitled to no respect or consideration from America.

HEATING BY REFRIGERATORS.

Whether a refrigerating machine can be adapted for use in heating small houses is a question which is being discussed in Italy; according to a report made by Consul Homer Britt to the Department of Commerce. The idea of using a cake of ice, or its substitute, for the production of heat might seem absurd on its face, but it is more than 2,000 years since the Greek fabulist reported that a satyr declined to have further dealing with a human after the latter was caught "blowing hot and cold" with the same breath.

In 1852 Lord Kelvin advanced an idea similar to that which is the base of the Italian experiment. It has been demonstrated that "a refrigerating machine pumps heat out of the body or the atmosphere which it is desired to cool to zero Centigrade, or less, and ejects it into the condenser at a temperature of 20 or 25 degrees, adding to the heat extracted the caloric equivalent of the energy used in driving the machine." Prof. Guarini, the Italian scientist, who has brought forth the idea of using the same device for cooling a house in summer and heating it in winter, explained in his lecture in Milan, that, while it will be necessary to develop a new technique so as to reduce as much as possible the jump in temperature between the evaporator and the condenser, "the quantity of useful heat per kilowatt hour obtainable with refrigerating apparatus depends upon the power of the machine and the difference in levels of temperature, being greater as the machine is more powerful and diminishing when the temperature change between evaporator and condenser augments."

It has not yet been proved that the refrigerating process for heating a residence, or a room, can be accomplished at a cost less than when coal or gas is employed, but with the suggested change in the technical details it is believed that in Italy, which has to import all its coal, and which has abundant electric power, it may be proved that the cost of heating a house with the aid of a refrigerator can be reduced to about one-half the cost of an equal amount of heat from coal.

As yet the manufacturers of mechanical refrigerators in this country have not explored this field.

UNITED STATES OF EUROPE.

From the National Republic.

It has been widely assumed in this country that Premier Briand's proposal of a United States of Europe is aimed at the United States—that it is a measure of retaliation against the economic power of the United States of America. Fear of American economic power based not on our tariff policy but on immense investments by American international bankers and industrialists, may in part inspire this proposal. But so far from opposing this idea, and regarding it as inimical to the United States, American well-wishers of peace and security should hail the suggestion as a forward step in the development of western European civilization. Great obstacles stand in the way, but they may be overcome to the extent of bringing about a customs and commercial union.

Such a union would contribute to the peace and prosperity of Europe. The political system of Europe is war-breeding, because the multiplication of nationalities, each economically insufficient, lies at the bottom of most of the clash of interests which make war the natural outcome of irreconcilable economic differences. All Europe west of Russia possesses a commerce equal only to that of the United States, while the remainder of the world constitutes only one unit of similar size.

The creation of a customs union including all the nations of continental Europe west of Russia would remove most of the causes of war in that area, create a large scale market for distributed production, and make possible the lifting of the standard of living to a point where the output of mass production could be consumed. This would constitute no menace to the United States. Our stake in foreign trade is not so great as is generally believed. It constitutes only 10 per cent of our total trade, and since we practically balance our exports with imports it adds nothing to our net national wealth. The raising of European wage and living standards would remove the menace of competition destructive to American living standards, and by raising the world's consuming power would take care of the increasing output of the machine age. Contrary to general belief, tariff and other forms of restriction against American products are already much more severe than those we impose in this country against articles of foreign production. We are in position to protect ourselves against unfair foreign competition by doing more of our own work if we are denied the chance to do more work for the outside world.

Europe is now in such a situation as that which would prevail within the borders of the area of the United States if each State were a nation, with its own tariff system, and with intense rivalry based upon the fact that every State is dependent to some extent upon its neighbors both for the materials entering into production and for an outlet for its production. It is because Europe is organized for war through a crazy-quilt of nationalities, involved in economic, dynastic, religious and racial rivalries, that clear-headed Americans have been determined to avoid the involvement of the United States in the European political system. When western Europe organizes for peace through a pooling of economic interests a great step will have been taken toward world peace and security. This is a step necessarily long antecedent to patient reception in this country of any plan of world pooling of resources, because Europe must first lift the standard of living of her people to a higher level before Americans are asked to accept their level, which could not now be done without destruction of our political fabric.

Victor Hugo and others before him dreamed of a United States of Europe. It is a far-off possibility, if we think of such a union as an elimination of existing nationalities. But the first step of economic union could be taken without a sharp break with traditions too strong to be quickly abandoned. And such union would be a far better guarantee of the world's peace than all the paper treaties ever written. Such treaties are only temporary and ultimately worthless expedients so long as Europe maintains a political system which leads periodically to war, and to a degree we can not fully comprehend here. This results from economic pressure by the masses.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE GOLFER.

The golfer doesn't fret about
The money he may owe.
When customers go walking out
No sorrow does he show.
His business blunders day by day
Appear to vex him not;
But watch him fling his club away
Whene'er he dubs a shot.

In trade a golfer seems to be Contented with his fate.
He does not think and work that he
At double A may rate,
To be the richest man alive
He would not stir his bones,
But still he thinks he ought to drive
As far as Bobby Jones.

It frets him not that other men
More goods can make or sell,
Though far below the upper ten
He think's he's doing well.
But put a glof club in his hand
And he becomes possessed
Of notions that he ought to stand
Among the Nation's best.

He practices upon the lot
And lessons takes from pros.
With every well-played brassie shot
His face with rapture glows;
But when he dubs, in bitter rage
He curses club and ball,
Regardless of his size or age
He hopes to beat them all.

The Loss of the Ship Begins When One Sailor's Impudence Goes Unrebuked.

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

THE greatest enemies of a country are its indifferent friends.

America's present troubles are due to the fact that the average man doesn't care.

When some menace or wrong appears without warning, the shock of surprise is sufficient to arouse the popular interest necessary to overcome it.

But threats and injustices and indecencies that develop gradually seldom meet with opposition, for public tolerance grows with the evil itself and custom makes wrong seem right.

If the women of 1910 had discarded the greater part of their clothing and appeared in public as women dressed last year, all the world would have joined in a chorus of condemnation; but the change came so gradually that each new exposure seemed but little worse than the accepted standard that preceeded it, and at last women walked the streets almost nude without great hurt to themselves or the beholder.

If the indecencies that now are commonplace in books and plays had appeared twenty years ago, those responsible for the innovation would have been sent to jail and that would have ended the business.

But the first "daring" sentence or scene dared so little that its naughtiness was merely amusing, and each subsequent change was so slight that few were shocked enough to protest—so that the producers themselves, striving always to provide a thrill, at last reached the level of common filth without realizing how they got there.

A similar process and a similar growth of callous indifference explain the present impudence of crime.

Suppose the gangs that now infest large cities had appeared in a day 30 years ago; suppose men entrusted with public money had all at once used it to gamble in stocks; suppose public servants had been found guilty of accepting bribes; suppose men in high places had as one man openly violated the laws and given mere lip service to good citizenship.

You know what the result would have been.

Newspaper headlines would have blazed with indignation; outraged citizens would have organized and armed themselves; juries and judges would have given short shrift to culprits brought before them, and traitors who escaped the lash of the law would have been coated with tar.

But corruption developed so gradually that public tolerance developed with it, and now the country's moral sense is so dead and its standards so confused that no new disclosure of corruption arouses more than a cynical shrug of indifference.

Crooks remain in office and are accepted in good society.

Common people scorn law because the great make a mock of it.

Dirt accumulates undisturbed when people grow accustomed to it and no longer feel ashamed.

Broker—On what?

Investor—Case Threshing Machine.

Broker—I don't recall any such security. Are you sure you have the right name?

Investor (quite shattered)—I'll spell it for you . . . C for custard, A for aspirin, S for sunk and E for Emma. T for Thomas, H for ham, R for rummy . . .

Broker—I understand, but I never heard of any such stock. Ask me about some other issue.

Investor—Well, what's American Telephone & Telegraph now?

Broker—What's the name of that one again, please?

Investor—American Telephone & Telegraph.

Broker—You don't mean American Beet Sugar, do you?

Investor—I mean American Telephone & Telegraph. I bought 100 shares a year ago on your recommendation of it as a high-grade issue that was depression proof.

Broker—I don't remember ever having heard of any stock by that name. There must be some mistake.

Investor (not quite frazzled)—Gimme the last quotations on General Electric.

Broker—General who?

Investor—General Electric.

Broker—Is it a listed stock?

Investor (desperately)—Of course it's a listed stock.

Broker—What was the name again?

Investor—General Electric.

Broker—It must be on the curb or produce exchange. Nobody ever heard of it.

Investor (on the verge of complete collapse)—Could you tell me what Consolidated Gas is doing now?

Broker—I remember vaguely a stock of that name, but it isn't traded in any more.

Investor—Well, surely you can give me some information on United States Steel and New York Central, can't you? I bought those on the advice of my bank.

Broker—United States Central and New York what?

Investor—United States Steel and New York Central.

Broker—What are they, oil stocks?

Investor (wildly)—Listen . . . United States Steel . . . the big steel company.

Broker—Big heel company?

Investor—Steel . . . s-t-e-e-l.

Broker—You must be in error. There's no such company!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

St. Mary's Rabbits and Massachusetts Hens Have a Nose for Hard Beverages. They Should Be Employed in the Enforcement of the Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: St. Marys County is in a fair way to lose its proud status as the foremost region in the entire country in the matter of law breaking animals. For the past ten years, St. Mary's rabbits have indulged greedily in the by-products of the stills which have made their home county famous throughout Southern Maryland. Day after day, and night after night have come reports from the neighborhood of the Wicomico River that motorists and pedestrians were attacked, and tires punctured, by these predatory, roystering rodents. So fierce have been these small animals when influenced by the grains thrown out from the stills hidden away in the woods of the county that timid people are afraid to traverse the roads and highways leading to Rock Point and other resorts, except when provided with shotguns or other defensive weapons.

Now, says the Boston Transcript which is invariably free from exaggeration, hyperbole or inaccuracy in its news columns, a number of hens and cows near the Newberry Road in the town of Ipswich have been exhibiting signs of such beastly intoxication as to arouse the curiosity of field agents of the prohibition enforcement office. So thoroughly drunk were a number of the fowl and kine discovered by these agents that they decided to ascertain the source of supply which led to the distressing conditions. Their search led to the discovery of one of the biggest stills found in the Old Bay State since the foundation of the colony of Massachusetts Bay.

St. Mary's rabbits have not thus far pointed the way to any of the moonshine factories. Massachusetts hens are evidently far more useful to the Prohibtion Bureau than St. Mary's rabbits. They should be more generally employed in the enforcement of the law which has just been committed to the care of the Attorney General.

Motorists Do Not Deliberately Park Too Close to Fire Plugs—The No-Parking Area Should Be Marked Off With White Paint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every day energetic policemen place pink tickets in automobiles for parking too close to fire plugs. It is only natural for motorists to slip up once in a while and park closer than the 10 feet prescribed in the regulations. If a motorist deliberately parks in front of a fire plug he deserves a ticket, but the average motorist does not violate this regulation deliberately.

There are no markings to indicate the exact limits of the no-parking areas around fire plugs. The curb on both sides of every plug should be painted white for a distance of 10 feet and then motorists would know where not to park. Lanes for pedestrians are laid off, so why not lay off 10 feet on each side of the hydrant to aid motorists when parking?

The Brookhart Bill Does Not Provide Full Justice to Those Who Lost Out Under the "Interpretation" of the Welch Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Brookhart bill as passed by Congress does not correct the injustice of the Welch bill. This bill originally carried a "retroactive" clause which would give to those receiving "one-step" raises the money to which they were entitled, by intent of Congress, under the Welch bill. This clause has been stricken from the present bill. The "one-stepper" is not to be paid the full "two-step" increase to which he is entitled.

There is yet time to correct this injustice. Give the "one-stepper" the money to which he has been entitled since July 1, 1930.

"PENALIZED ONE-STEPPER".

Soldiering Is Romantic—Give the Army the Blue Uniforms That Romance Requires.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Representative Edith Nourse Rogers asks for early action on her bill authorizing an appropriation of $1,000,000 with which to supply the personnel of the United States Army with the blue dress uniforms that were discarded during the war. Enactment of the measure, she says, would prove of great benefit to the woolen and shoe industries. But the proposal to dress up the Army should not be put on such a basis.

In the days before the war, soldiers on parade, resplendent in their brave blue uniforms, stepping out behind the measured notes of a military band or executing intricate formations, brought the spectator to realize the majesty, the power and the glory of the country they served. Today, parading soldiers make the heart beat faster, but the emphasis is on drab reality. The squad, company or regiment is prepared so far as its dress is concerned to proceed immediately from the parade ground to digging trenches.

Soldiering is not all digging trenches, shooting cannon and serving motor trucks. The life of a soldier is essentially romantic and he should be equipped with the uniforms that romance requires. Give the Army back its blues and add a crimson stripe down the seam of the trousers, gold braid for the shoulders, plumed shakos with patent leather visors, white gloves and gilded muskets! Let the Army look and play its part when it does not have to engage in the grim business of war!

20 MEXICAN REDS KILLED BY POLICE

Score Wounded in Clash at Matamoras; Troops Restore Order.

PARADE PERMIT DENIED

Mexico City, June 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Twenty Communists were killed and as many more wounded in a clash with Mexican police at Matamoras, in the State of Coahuila, yesterday, according to dispatches reaching here today from Torreon. Several police were also wounded in the rioting.

The streets and plazas of Matamoras were strewn with dead and dying when troops rushed from Torreon arrived there and restored order. A call was made on the Red Cross for medical aid.

The fight between the police and the Communists began when the latter insisted on parading despite repeated refusals by the authorities to grant a permit for them to do so. The parade was organized as a protest against the arrests of Reds in Lower California and other parts of Mexico.

When the manifestants, carrying subversive banners, headed toward the main square of Matamoras yesterday, the police blocked their way. From the ranks of the marchers a fusillade of shots was suddenly poured into a body of police. Arturo Pena, chief of police, fell seriously wounded.

Prostrate on the ground, he called upon his men to return the fire. Volley after volley was fired into the ranks of the Communists before they could flee to cover. Many innocent bystanders also stopped bullets.

Matamoras is a hotbed of Communism. A branch of the Communist organization was established there at the time Stanley Petskofsky was Soviet minister to this country. Since then Communist propaganda in Coahuila has been aimed at gaining control of the workers in the cotton fields of that state.

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

IF the Republicans think their Senator Norris is a most irregular man they should consider the candidates in the Democratic senatorial primary out in Nebraska. The conclusion is apt to be that it is the State itself that is irregular.

Norris is seeking renomination on the Republican ticket notwithstanding the fact that he supported Al Smith, the Democratic presidential candidate.

But now on the Democratic side, Mrs. Jennie Callfas is seeking the nomination, although she supported Mr. Hoover.

* * * * *

DR. CALLFAS—she is a very prominent doctor and said to be as astute as any male politician in the State—is opposed by former Senator Gilbert Hitchcock, who was Senate leader when the Democrats were last in power.

It would seem to be a pretty play if she should win.

Then all the Democrats in the State could vote for the Republican, Senator Norris, and all the Republicans could vote for the doctor. There would seem to be a ready means of expression for the entire electorate.

* * * * *

HITCHCOCK, who must be pretty old by now, only got into the race a few days ago and there has been considerable speculation here as to why he did it.

One first thought that he reckoned, and rightly so, that the Hoover Republicans would throw him their support in the event he won in the Democratic primary. Any such support as this that he would receive, however, would be offset by the Democrats who would vote for Senator Norris.

This being the case, some of the senator's friends think that Hitchcock must have come to the conclusion that Norris will be defeated in the Republican primary, and that Norris' opponent would not be a hard man for him to beat in November.

* * * * *

IF Mr. Hitchcock does think this, he is entitled, of course, to his optimism. And, of course, Mr. Hitchcock is on the scene and in a better position to make an accurate appraisal of the situation.

Nevertheless, one here is inclined to the belief that his hopes are simply those that come to old men.

There are three States in which Progressive senators must face the voters this year—Nebraska, Idaho and South Dakota. In each State it is a fair guess that the Hoover Republicans will vote for the Democratic candidate in an effort to get rid of Mr. Hoover's hair shirts. Out of three trials it would not be surprising if they were not successful in one. South Dakota would seem to be the best bet.

Boys Stop to Fix Tire; Both Shot as Robbers

Holdenville, Okla., June 30 (A.P.).—Returning home from a camp meeting, Edward Greer, 16, was shot to death, and his brother, Henry, 18, was fatally wounded early today by L. W. A court of inquiry was convened to determine whether charges should be filed against Harris.

agents by express company officials, who reported that a suit case consigned to Mr. Layne had been leaking. They also revealed that a trunk which had arrived at the same time with the hand luggage had been sent to Denison's office. The prohibition unit then made the raid, seized the trunk which was said to have been filled with assorted liquors and whisky. The raid was made on January 19, 1929, just after Denison is said to have returned from a congressional junket, but the matter was not given to the United States attorney until November. The indictment was returned almost immediately.

Mr. Denison, through Attorneys Everett Sanders, former secretary to President Coolidge; William E. Leahy and E. Hilton Jackson attacked the indictment charging that the raid on his office was without probable cause and asserting that the indictment was bad in form and substance.

Justice Gorden, in upholding the demurrer, pointed out that the true bill did not specify from whom the alleged liquor was purchased, did not describe the quantity or the character of the contraband, and merely asserted that some time during the three years priod to January 19, 1929, Denison had possession of liquor. The justice also declared that if Denison were acquitted in reference to the liquor in the trunk or suit case there would be nothing to prevent another indictment on a possession charge.

The indictment of the Representative and Mr. Layne was a surprise and marked the first instance of the kind to occur in this jurisdiction since the Jones act. Since the passage of that act mere possession charges as a rule have been handled exclusively in Police Court.

CAMPBELL EXPRESSES DISGUST WITH DRY LAW AS HE RETIRES

bition officials, admitting breakdown of the law, charged one another and their superiors with responsibility for the debacle.

Throughout the day Mr. Campbell held himself incommunicado, except to well-wishing coworkers. Late in the afternoon a Federal grand jury presentment accused the retiring administrator of such laxity that the "nonfeasance * * * is one of the evils that strike at the very root of our present national morale."

The presentment came with the indictment of Bishop Charles Mrzena of the Czechoslovakian Orthodox Catholic Church and eighteen others on charges of conspiracy in connection with withdrawals of sacramental wine.

After this parting shot, accompanied by a statement by United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle, reared above a stack of congratulatory telegrams on his desk, Mr. Campbell at 6 o'clock issued the following statement in reply:

"Mr. Tuttle is playing politics. Realizing his shortcomings in prohibition enforcement and desiring above all things to be candidate for governor of this State, he takes this method of discrediting in advance any statement he thinks I might make as to the conduct of his office. If Mr. Tuttle's record were as clean as mine he would not take the trouble to incite a grand jury to make this unfounded presentation."

Having already handed out his unexpected general broadside against prohibition and its chief active exponents, Mr. Campbell declined to give further elaboration of his sweeping charges. Picking up the golf bag and clubs that had been presented to him by 400 coworkers after hours in a secret meeting, when Mr. Campbell appeared too choked with emotion to express his thanks in detail, he ordered a trunk sent home and jauntily reentered private life about sundown, although he technically held office until midnight.

In his belligerent farewell note, Mr. Campbell said there was a "long story" behind his retirement "which I can not discuss at this time," that Washington and New York Republican leaders require prohibition laxity "in order to secure necessary support for the Republican ticket in New York this fall," that transfer of prohibition enforcement to the Justice Department will "mean nothing" as long as political aspirations cripple prosecution, and that "prohibition is not the logical solution for temperance in our form of government."

He said he would have two successors, Mr. McCampbell and William D. Moss, the latter of whom will have charge of liquor permits in this district, a duty heretofore solely in charge of the administrator.

Mr. Campbell lauded Moss from personal acquaintance, but publicly admonished him "to gather all his strength to withstand the onslaught."

The grand jury presentment was handed up to Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe, together with a conspiracy indictment against Bishop Mrzena and an indictment against Father Peter J. Paahklewych, of St. Mary's Ukrainian Church, New Britain, Conn., for perjury.

It is alleged that the New Britain pastor testified falsely before the grand jury as to the amount of wine withdrawn by him for sacramental purposes. He swore that 1,800 gallons had been so withdrawn, whereas, according to investigators, a comparatively small quantity had been taken over by the priest for sacramental purposes.

The indictment of the bishop and his associate sets forth that the conspiracy continued from July 1, 1928, to June 5, 1930. The operations of the alleged conspirators are described in detail.

Stock Fire Insurance and National Prosperity

That American business is sound is witnessed by the huge construction program which marks this year 1930.

Billions of dollars are being invested by public utilities and railroads; by municipal, state and federal governments in public buildings, plants, bridges and highways; by private interests serving the public in a large way. Improvements, extensions and new projects are the order of the day. Prosperity and credit in this country cannot long be jarred by any speculative flurry.

A Wall of Defense

One major reason for this is the protection afforded by insurance. Stock Fire Insurance alone provides a coverage of around 150 billion dollars, thus setting up a wall of defense for industry and property that no adversity can seriously harm.

Without the support of Stock Fire Insurance the billions for new enterprises and replacements could not be spent. Business would undertake no such pretentious program without the stabilization, the protection and the indemnity which Stock Fire Insurance makes possible.

Yet consistently, through the last twenty years, the cost of this basic commercial necessity has declined.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Visitors Note City's Growth Near Embassy

Garden Suburb in Heart fo Capital Greatly Admired.

By JEAN ELIOT.

OLD time residents of Washington, who come a-visiting to the Capital after long absence, are greatly impressed with the charming suburbs which are growing up round about and particularly with the development along both sides of Massachusetts avenue, which is really a garden suburb in the heart of the city.

The phrase, "Fashion follows the British Embassy" was coined long ago, but its truth has again been borne out, for there has been a notable increase in building activity in the vicinity since ground was broken for John Bull's new home, into which the British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay have recently moved. And now plans have been completed for the new Japanese Embassy a few blocks away, which is to be built on three sides of a court, with the ambassador's residence in the center and two wings, one devoted to offices and the other to a sort of indoor playground, opening onto tennis courts, a swimming pool and whatnot.

Back of the British Embassy in W street, but facing its most ornamental facade, a little community of homes of prominent Washingtonians is growing up. Among those who have built in this neighborhood, are building or are about to build are Senator and Mrs. Frederick H. Gillett, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, Commander and Mrs. Paul Bastedo and Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Huidekoper. The plan is for these residences to have community gardens overlooking the beautifully landscaped British Embassy grounds.

Across Massachusetts avenue, skirting the parkway along Rock Creek, another group of charming homes is growing up. The house which Mrs. Frederick C. Hicks is building back of the Hungarian Legation and the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies is rapidly taking shape, and not far away is the new home of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davidge, who have been living on Wyoming avenue. Mrs. Davidge is the daughter of the late Mr. John W. Weeks, who was Secretary of War. Mrs. Hicks, whose late husband was in Congress for many years and later served as alien property custodian, has long been an apartment dweller, but has finally decided that she must have a house.

It is in this same region that Miss Helen Cannon has bought a lot, with the intention of building some day. Miss Cannon was her father's official hostess for the many years that "Uncle Joe" Cannon was Speaker of the House and formed then close ties which bind her to Washington. She has spent many winters in the Capital since her father's death, and last winter occupied the house in R street, which is to be the future home of Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes. At present she is abroad with her nieces, Mrs. Dorsey Richardson and Mrs. William Houghteling.

In the same picturesque neighborhood is the home of Senator Bronson Cutting, which formerly belonged to Dr. and Mrs. Louis Lehr. In Thirtieth street, not far away, is Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Miller's pleasant residence and in Belmont road, which turns somewhat unexpectedly hereabouts, is Mme. Paul Lessinoff's delightful new house, her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William North Sturtevant, having an equally charming residence hard by on Kalorama Circle.

Another interesting new residence, which is now nearing completion is Mr. Charles Mason Remey's house on Massachusetts avenue, next door to the home of Mrs. Mark Reid Yates. The owner classifies its rather curious architecture as "Mediterranean." It is built of brick, with an oddness of outlines which promises interesting interior treatment.

Secretary Mellon and his son spent the week-end with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. David K. E. Bruce, at their home on Long Island.

The Minister of The Netherlands, Mr. J. H. van Royen, had as his guest at the legation yesterday Mr. Evert van Dyk, the distinguished Dutch flier, who was copilot of the Southern Cross on its westward crossing of the Atlantic. The minister presented his compatriot to the President when the commander of the adventurous expedition, Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith, and the others of the crew, Mr. John W. Stannage and Mr. J. Patrick Saul, were presented by the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, and the Charge d'Affaires of Ireland, Mr. William J. B. Macauley. The group was afterward entertained at luncheon at the White House.

MRS. PAUL MAYO,
married yesterday with picturesque ceremony. She was Miss Katherine Sutherland and is the daughter of Mr. Howard Sutherland, alien property custodian, and Mrs. Sutherland.

Capital Girl Is Married To Mr. Mayo

Miss Sutherland Is Wed to Educator of Denver U.

At the home of her parents, 1845 R street, yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock Miss Katherine Sutherland, daughter of Mr. Howard Sutherland, alien property custodian, and Mrs. Sutherland, was married to Mr. Paul Mayo, son of Mrs. Henry Mayo, of Denver, Colo. Only a few friends and relatives were present although the company was representative of official and resident society, many distinguished people having remained in town for the wedding.

After the ceremony a reception was held, the bride and bridegroom leaving later for a honeymoon trip to Hot Springs, Va., and to the White Mountains. After August 1 they will be at home at Mr. Mayo's estate, Rosedale, at Evergreen, Colo. They will travel on alternate years as Mr. Mayo enters into economic research in a selected foreign country each year, returning for a year's teaching at the University of Denver.

For the wedding the Sutherland house was effectively decorated in lilies and palms which were used throughout the house and formed a setting for the improvised altar with its tall cathedral candelabra where the service took place, the Rev. Frederick H. Barron, of West Virginia, officiating. A stringed orchetra played during the afternoon.

The bride wore a French gown of ivory duchesse satin and rose point, intricately seeded in pearls and made in the prevailing princess mode. Long lace sleeves added an unusually smart touch to the gown which had a straight neckline. The long skirt swept to a court train which was heavily embroidered in pearls. The veil was of tulle and was caught to a tight-fitting cap of tulle outlined with a tiny band of satin on which was repeated the design of pearl embroidery. The sheaf of calla lilies which the bride carried completed the picturesque and medieval effect of the wedding dress. She was given in marriage by her father.

Mrs. Jules Glaenzer came from New York to serve as matron of honor. Also wearing an original French model, Mrs. Glaezner was lovely in a gown of turquoise lace made ankle length, the skirt flaring at the even hemline and the bodice cut with a slightly round neckline and puff sleeves. A hat of natural straw trimmed with turquoise ribbon and a corsage of dark orchids added a smart note.

The brother of the bridegroom, Mr. Ralph Mayo, was best man and small Stanley Sutherland Harris, nephew of the bride and her godson, was the ring bearer. He wore a suit of white satin with knee length breeches.

Mrs. Sutherland and Mrs. Mayo stood in line after the ceremony with Mr. Mayo and his bride to receive the guests, the former in a gown of beige chiffon, trimmed in matching lace applique. The costume was completed by a short jacket of chiffon, a brown horsehair hat, trimmed with a single orange flower, and brown shoes.

Here for the wedding were: Mrs. Wallis Bleecker Dunckel, of Paris, the former Miss Margaret Sutherland; Mrs. John Sydney Walker, jr., of Huntington, W. Va.; Mrs. Richard Sutherland, of Paris; Mrs. Ralph Mayo, Mr. Jules Glaenzer, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Waring, of Charleston, S. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Peckham, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Hartman and Mr. Gordon Sarr, of New York; Mrs. Lalla Blays, of Hancock, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Collins and Mr. Richard Scandrett, jr., of New York; Mr. Warner Schelley and Mr. Harry Evans, of New York, and Mr. Joseph Hergersheimer.

Their return route will include the Northwest, with stops at Portland and Seattle, and a stay of several days at Banff and Lake Louise in the Canadian Rockies. They will return by Minneapolis and Chicago, reaching Washington about the middle of August.

Some time in July Dr. and Mrs. Kinsolving and their daughters, Anne and Sally, a debutante of next season, will go to Fishers Island, and in August Miss Anne Kinsolving will be the guest of Mrs. Nicholas Brown at Harbor Court, Newport, where there will be much entertaining for her.

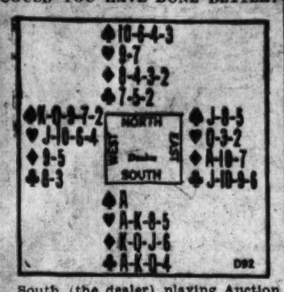
WORK ON BRIDGE

COULD YOU HAVE DONE BETTER?



South (the dealer) playing Auction Bridge did not permit a single Ace to keep him from bidding No Trump, and there being no overcall he obtained his contract with his first bid.

Had the hand been played at Contract, South probably would have bid three No Trumps unless he was using some system which included an initial bid that would force the partner to keep the declaration open. With such great strength it would be dangerous for South to bill less than game and risk having his partner pass.

In the Auction Bridge play, West led the Seven of Spades, dummy played small, East played the Jack and South won with the Ace. South then established his Diamonds, East winning and returning his partner's Spade with the hope that West had an entry; but as soon as the King and Queen of Spades won, the Declarer was able to show down for the remaining tricks. Consequently the takings of the adversaries were limited to three tricks.

Could you have done better?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

The hand would not have been a show down for the Declarer had not a serious error been made by East. When playing to the first trick, his partner having led the Seven of Spades, he could subtract seven from eleven and find that the remainder was four; so there were four Spades higher than the Seven not held by the leader. East seeing the Jack, Ten and Eight, would know that South had exactly one Spade higher than the Seven and also that it must be an honor as West would not have led a small card from Ace-King-Queen. Consequently East's play of the Jack was utterly foolish; a small Spade would have forced the high Spade from South equally well. With East playing the Eight of Spades and South winning with the Ace, East after winning with the Ace of Diamonds could lead the Jack atnd another Spade and game could be saved as the adversaries would win four Spades and one Diamond.

Art Interprets the Mode

A summer evening frock of light green georgette, bordered at the hem and on the capelet with gold paillettes. (Courtesy of Redfern, Paris.)

PARIS, June 30.—O-O-O-O-O-O-O! More and bigger and beteers News! All about cotton it is, cotton that is being fashioned into dressy wear.

Of course, your natural reaction is—"Well, cotton can never take the place of silk in my life for dressy wear; I'd even spurn it for silk in sports!"

The fact of the matter is, as you say, that cotton can never quite take the place of silk. But believe me or not, I've seen with my own two blue eyes a marquisette evening frock, an organdie one and a decidedly dressy afternoon ensemble with a black linen dress and a pink linen coat. Of course, they are carefully designed and made, with the very finest of material and the most modish lines.

But there you have it! Or would you?

Well, I would! Tell you why—it takes real distinction to wear, and, the very fact of your wearing a black linen ensemble in a gathering of chic black silks, distinguishes you. If you haven't personality and distinction, don't try it—do, if you have.

Having just made the ribbon black the left-hand artist who gets goofier by the minute (as do we all) comes forth with the belated information that it-should-uv-been pink. So with a boat train to make and a cuckoo clock hooting in my ear about fitting hours, I'm just going to ask you to take my word for it that the delightfully arranged ribbon on the large, black, lacy, horsehair hat I have illustrated for you today is pink velvet.

Of course, hats have brims! For lots of reasons and in lots of shapes and sizes. The large hat follows the small close-fitting one in being quite high on the forehead, off the face, with the brim sometimes attached at the edge of the crown, sometimes higher up on the crown.

Could you believe that pale green crepe de chine and the correct distribution of gold paillettes could be so lovely? Redfern believed that it could, and I believed that I could interpret it for you in soulless pen and ink—so here it is, lovely lady, evening gown of quiet elegance, that any one could not help but feel distinguished in.

And I suggest green gloves of just a slightly darker shade, with tiny gold paillettes in place of the stitching!

If I know anything at all about feminine shopping, I know that the most difficult piece in the wardrobe to find and buy correctly is the brassiere. So what do I do but plan a way for you to stop dashing around madly to all and sundry stores and to make it yourself instead. There are several versions of the new form-fitting and form-improving brassiere included in the leaflet of directions, for which you send a stamped self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post. One model for evening wear, one combined with a garter belt, one crocheted, one of tulle or ribbon. And if you don't quite dare to try making it yourself, you can take the direction to some one who will know how to go about it.

And here's the reminder—the weekly Dare fashion letter in the Sunday Washington Post each week.

Au revoir!

Of course one studying Art for pelf
Will always keep awake himself;
But I suggest the Armadillo
Would make the finest kind of pillow
For one who wished to keep awake
While studying Art for Art's own sake!

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"CANCER."

IF July 1 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., from 5 p. m. to 6 p. m. and 8 p. m to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 a. m. to 9:40 a. m. and 3 p. m. to 4:15 p. m.

You can not expect things to move rapidly on this date—influences are against it. A feeling of depression, although no reverses or actual sorrows, are in sight. Not a good time to deal in land or property.

Children born on this July 1 will have extravagant tastes, will be very proud, almost disdainful in their dignity. They will have quick intellects and also quick tempers. Their affections and jealousies may lead them into trouble.

If you were as positive in your "I cans" as you are in your "I can'ts," the world would be sitting at your feet, instead of you leading a doormat existence, as you do. It is hard to explain why you always try to find reasons (usually silly one) for not doing the things of your heart's desire. It is also hard to understand why you turn a deaf ear to the voices of opportunity, when your hearing is so keen in regard to the pessimistic things in life.

You are a self-appointed martyr. Destiny does not have her knife in you more than the rest of the people of the world.

Whatever your difficulties may be, they are not peculiar to you. Put some stiffening in your back to say "Yes!" where you now say "No!" and stand up and not sit down to your troubles. Stop being a pathetic failure.

You have real artistic ability (latent of course), which, if developed, might be of commercial value, as well as a pleasure in your life. You are too impractical and too sensitive for the business world. You thoroughly dislike the struggle for the bread and butter part of existence; you would like to be taken care of in this respect.

The fullest growth and widest life, for you, occurs after marriage. You will follow parental lines very closely, both in character and in occupation. Your nature is very receptive to psychic influences.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

WE have a rather steep terrace which has failed to hold sod and was also unsuccessfully seeded. It is exposed to the afternoon sun and needs some sort of plant which thrives in heat and also grows quickly to form a cover. What do you think would be best to use?

M. V. H.

Plant hugonis or rambler roses. They soon cover a bank and are lovely when in bloom. Plant them at the top of the terrace and incorporate plenty of fertilizer with the soil. Keep the plants well watered the first season.

Please tell me how to keep the plant of which I am inclosing a few leaves in a healthy state. I have planted a Jerusalem cherry in the open border. Is this a correct way to keep the plant over the summer? MRS. H. F.

Keep primrose in a sunny place on your porch and see that it is at all times well watered. Remove all flowers and leaves as soon as they show signs of wilting. Spray plant once a week with soapy water. A Jerusalem cherry does very well in the open in summer.

Please tell me how to care for peonies which have a tendency to lose their buds before they open. Also tell me how to get rid of ants which simply cover the plants in the early spring. MRS. R. R.

Peonies are heavy feeders and require a deeply prepared soil. The best soil is one which is not too heavy with clay nor too light with sand. Never use any but well-rotted manure around peony roots. Each plant must have a space of 3 feet in which to develop. When planted, the top eye should not be more than 2 inches from the surface of the soil. When the plants have finished blooming, work must be begun to insure a good crop of flowers the following season. Never permit weeds to grow in close proximity to peonies, as they will rob the soil of its richness. Peonies, though free of insect enemies, are likely to be attacked by pernicious "bud rot," which is evidently the reason your plants fail to open their buds. Better in the future avoid manure about the crowns of the plants. Begin to spray your plants in the early spring and keep up the good work each week until late May. Use Bordeaux mixture for this purpose. If you care to write again, inclosing a self-addresseed, stamped envelope, I shall be glad to send you the name of a proprietary preparation which will aid you in getting rid of ants.

All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is supplied.

Shopping with Bab

DEAREST GENEVIEVE: So you are leaving Thursday night for the week-end? Isn't that splendid. I hope you have a marvelous time, as I am sure you deserve it. All the shops have special events scheduled for today and the remainder of the week, which will make buying easy for every one. Never in my personal experience at least have there been such bargains in all sorts of wearing apparel in all sections of town. If you shop intelligently you can save so much.

Every One Ordered Picnic Lunches

—from the Gentlewomen's League, No. 1 Dupont Circle, after reading what I wrote you Sunday. The most delicious sandwiches, fried chicken, deviled crabs, individual lemon meringues, tarts and cakes, and every sort of goodies may be ordered, from 50 cents per person on up. Telephone Potomac 2663.

Underwood & Underwood's Summer Discount

—is in effect now. This is the event which you should take advantage of immediately, whether or not you really want photographs at this time.

You may have 25 per cent discount on all studio sittings. If you are holding proofs from which you have never ordered, take them in now and put in your order at this discount price. This is effective, too, on re-orders, so this is an all-around worth-while summer discount period.

Think what this reduction does to high-priced pictures! When you begin to figure what it makes of $50 a dozen, or even $30 a dozen, you realize that now is the time.

It is probably no exaggeration to say that most of the pictures made now are done in outdoor settings. This is natural when you consider how lovely the gardens are, with blooming flowers and sparkling fountains. Summer frocks make attractive pictures, more so than any others, it seems to me. You do not have the advantage of the discount in home portraits, but you may want them anyway.

Stop in at Camalier & Buckley's

—today without fail and select some purses for yourself from the wonderful collection on sale at 20% reduction. You know, of course, that everything in Camalier & Buckley's has been in stock only about three months, as the shop is not older than that. Therefore, the handbags are the latest models and could not possibly be shop-worn. Imagine what 20 per cent reduction does to the prices of these handsome bags! You will revel in the beautiful inside finish and linings, and the delicate workmanship in each and every model.

Pale pastel colors in silks and patent leathers, in ecrase, with smart harness clasps in prystal, crystal and decorated metal, embroidered fabrics, the thinnest flat envelopes, roomy pouches, almost any type of hand-bag you could want may be purchased in this sale. Some of the bags are marked as low as $4. It will be many a long day, before you again have a chance to buy such perfect bags at such tiny prices. Camalier and Buckley, 1141 Connecticut avenue.

You Love Hand-Made Lingerie

—and so will be delighted to know about a new shop which has just recently opened, Bath Stebener Arts, 1308 Connecticut avenue. On hand looms in the rear of the shop expert needlewomen are busy fashioning designs in drawnwork and hemstitching which make your fine garments a joy to wear.

Bath Stebener makes a specialty of trousseaus, and features besides lingerie, pajamas, negligees, table linens, bed linens, monograms on your own things.

If you have wondered where you could have lingerie made to your measure, this is the solution of your problem. The shop is cool and attractive, a pleasant place to choose your designs and discuss your plans.

Pasternak's Sale Began Yesterday

—and every one who went in went out with lovely models. Pasternak's entire spring and summer collection of coats, suits, dresses and hats for all occasions have been priced at drastic reductions. You will never believe until you see the prices for yourself, and until you see the quality, line and styles of the individual models, what an opportunity this is.

A group of individual models, including gowns for every time of day, have been marked to cost and below—

The Misses' Department

Features three lovely groups for street and afternoon frocks which have been marked $8.75—$12.50—$14.50—$19.50.

Suits and frocks in printed silks and some laces and chiffons, which were $37.50 to $49.50, are now $25.

Dinner and evening gowns in printed silks, printed and plain chiffon in black and pastel shades are now $35.

Flannel coats in white and pastel colors are $15.

Hats in all the season's best models are priced at $5 and $10.

Pasternak, 1219 Connecticut avenue.

Shantung Suits At Philip-Louise

—have just come in. You have been waiting for shantungs and here they are, a sleeveless frock and jaunty coat, beautifully made, as low as $12.50. Other shantungs, with more important fashioning and finish, are priced at $22.50.

Adorable chiffons, some with their own coats, are marked $22.50, and are good values.

Well-made dotted swisses trimmed in batiste and Irish crochet are $15. Philip-Louise, 1727 L street.

Glaser Has Hats For the Fourth

—reduced in price to such a low figure, that you will be glad you waited until now to buy one. There is a large assortment, with plenty of white hats in lovely shapes, as well as pastels and the always smart navy and brown and black bakus and balibuntls.

This is the place you have heard so much about, Glaser, 1532 Connecticut avenue.

Nancy Carter Shop Remains Open

—all summer, regardless of the fact that some shops in that neighborhood close for a few weeks. Hundreds of people stay in town the summer through, and what they would do without the Nancy Carter Shop to run to, I should hate to contemplate.

New cotton mesh frocks in white and colors have just arrived for today's selling, in time for replenishing your Fourth of July weekend wardrobe. Also, a small collection of lovely chiffons have been reduced in price for the first time, beginning today.

The Nancy Carter Shop, 1021 Connecticut avenue.

EDUCATORS TO FIGHT NATIONAL PREJUDICE

Association Announces Plan to Level World Barriers in American Schools.

CAPITAL MAN ELECTED

Columbus, Ohio, June 30 (A.P.).—The ambitious program of the National Education Association to extend the facilities for learning to the point of breaking down the barriers that have separted one nation's children from another, was outlined by speakers before the sixty-eighth annual convention today.

Children in the preschool age will receive more education from their parents, who, in turn, will receive greater instruction in preparation of the youngsters for their school life.

And when the children take up the study of history, geography, science and kindred subjects, they will be taught to get away from the old idea of national prejudice and hidebound patriotism, if the association can put into effect the suggestions made today by Paul Dengler, director of the Austro-American Institute of Education at Vienna.

Preparations for Marriage.

Dr. Jessie Charters, of Ohio State University, sugegsted that the forces of education dig into a subject that has yet been untouched—the preparation of young boys and girls for the married state and for homemaking, even while they are acquiring the routine education of life.

Once out of school, the young man and woman will still be susceptible to more learning, for E. Ruth Pyrtle, of Lincoln, Nebr., president of the association, revealed today that the organization hopes to induce every one over 25 to use his leisure time by studying.

Director Dengler told the teacher delegates that the inventions which have brought one continent nearer another have faced mankind with an entirely new situation.

Feeling in Europe.

People everywhere are thinking internationally, he said, but there still exists, especially in Europe, a strong feeling of nationalism which makes one people suspicious of another. He assigned to the American schools the task of breaking down national walls by teaching the children to be what he termed "supernational."

"Not at the expense of patriotism," he said, "for national pride must exist, but people must learn that other nations, as well as their own, make definite contributions to education. National prejudice is the thing that must be overcome."

An insight into the number of women interested in child study classes sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association, as compared with men, was given by Miss Helen Heffernan, director of rural education in California. When that State's adult study classes were organized the membership consisted of 2,000 women and 52 men, and this proportion prevailed as the membership increased, she said.

Dr. Wright Elected.

There are three candidates in the field for president of the N. E. A. They are Dr. John W. Abercrombie, Montgomery, Ala., assistant superintendent of education in Alabama; Willis A. Sutton, Atlanta, Ga., and Joseph Rosier, Fairmount, W. Va.

Four new members were elected to the national council of education today and four officials were re-elected. The new members are Dr J. Wright, director of Federal vocational education, Washington, D. C.; Bess B. Goodrich, assistant superintendent of schools, Des Moines, Iowa; Dr. E. P. Cubberly, professor of Leland Stanford University, California, and Dr. Frank N. Freeman, of the University of Chicago. They will fill vacancies caused by death during the last year.

Mrs. Susan M. Dorsey, Los Angeles, was reelected vice president; Anna Laure Force, Denver, Colo., relected to the executive committee, and Carroll G. Pearse, Milwaukee, and Robert N. Wright, South Carolina, were named for another term on the membership committee.

mother manages a cafeteria in the hotel and whose apartment is next to that of the Marshalls, was standing on the fire escape with John Pinkham, 39 years old, a plumber, of 1826 Lawrence street northeast, when the shots rang out. They notified police. They had heard two rapid shots, followed by a single shot.

The couple had been estranged since last January. Mrs. Craddock had not lived at her husband's home at 115 South Patrick street, Alexandria, since that time. In March she had been awarded a temporary divorce with alimony. Craddock had made several demands that she return to him. Mrs. Craddock became frightened and came to live with the Marshalls.

Yesterday morning a rehearing of the divorce case was held in the corporation court in Alexandria and Mrs. Craddock was awarded the alimony.

Bullets Fall From Dress.

When headquarters detectives arrived the apartment was in wild disorder. Mrs. Craddock was still breathing and they removed her to an ambulance. As they lifted her, two bullets fell from her dress.

Aaron Johnson, 48 years old, a colored watchman in the hotel, said he heard a quarrel in the room on Sunday night. It was learned that Craddock had not visited the apartment on that night.

Prior to the killing and suicide Mrs Craddock had had lunch with Ella, Gladys and Frances Marshall, her sisters, who shared the apartment. Gladys and Frances Marshall had returned to their business places when the shooting occurred.

Bullet Buried in Wall.

In Craddock's pockets was a pass card showing that he had been an engineer on the Southern Railway since 1902. Lying near his body was a .32-caliber revolver. One of the bullets was embedded in the west wall of the living room of the apartment.

In addition to her sisters, Mrs. Craddock is survived by her mother; three children, Joseph Reynolds, 13 years old, by a previous marriage; and Alice Craddock, 10 years old and Robert Craddock, 8 years old.

The Craddock children are with one of his brothers in North Carolina. The Reynolds boy is staying with his grandparents.

Could Write a Book About It
"Nine years ago after my little girl was born dead, I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for about four months. The next year I became the mother of a fine 11 pound baby boy. After he was born, I kept on with the medicine to build me up. Four months ago I was nervous and rundown and suffered from other troubles which I knew Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would relieve so I started taking it and now I feel fine again. Many of my friends could write a book on the good the Vegetable Compound has done them."—Mrs. W. NEW INDIAN LEADER SEIZED BY BRITISH Arrest Marks Boycott Week in Bombay; Man Just Out of Jail Takes Job.

PARADES SET FOR TODAY

Bombay, June 30 (A.P.).—While the Bombay Nationalists today opened a "boycott week" against British goods, the government added another to the list of civil disobedience leaders who have been placed behind prison bars.

Pandit Motilal Nehru, acting president of the All-India National Congress, was the latest arrested. He was taken into custody at Allahabad along with Syed Mahmud, secretary of the congress.

When the civil resistance movement opened March 12 with a march to the sea for illegal salt-making, the leader, Mahatma Gandhi, was not molested for more than a month. The campaign grew in violence, however, and eventually Gandhi was interned in Yeroda Prison at Poona. After that hundreds of Nationalists were arrested, among them prominent Gandhi aids.

Patel Now Made Head.

One was Vallabhai Patel, who, although himself an active worker, is identified principally as the brother of V. J. Patel, former speaker of the Legislative Assembly. He was released from prison last week, and when Nehru was arrested today he designated Vallabhai as president of the All-India National Congress. Patel is understood to be preparing a new program of disobedience in the Gujera district.

The pandit was arrested after attending the three-day session of the congress working committee at Allahabad. Police raided the congress quarters, declaring the assembly unlawful, and sealed the doors against further meetings. Allahabad nationalists planned a hartal, or cessation of work, when the trial of Nehru and Mahmud opens tomorrow.

Bombay's "boycott week" is the climax to a long period of agitation against British goods. The chief weapons of the civil resistance movement have been raids against government salt works, nonpayment of land revenues, and picketing of foreign cloth and liquor shops.

Parades Are Ordered.

The rainy season has ended the salt raids, but picketing has diminished little, even in face of frequent arrests.

The program for this week began with a large parade today, and a heavy rain did not halt the activities. Tomorrow a large parade is planned and a partial cessation of work is scheduled.

Dry Agent Dies, Aid Hurt in Motor Crash

Columbus, Ohio, June 30 (A.P.).—Roy W. Shafer, 42, Columbus, Federal prohibition officer, was killed and Joseph Wolf, 27, Columbus, another Federal officer, was injured seriously near Lebanon, Ind., early today when a truck in which they were transporting secret records of the prohibition department from Columbus to Chicago was wrecked against a telephone pole, Charles R. Hurlbut, deputy administrator of the Southern Ohio District, said he was advised.

Hurlbut said two trucks and six men had been sent to Chicago with the secret records of Federal enforcement in Indiana which recently was transferred from the district of which Columbus was the headquarters to the Illinois District with headquarters in Chicago.

Capital Man Presides At Meeting of Kiwanis

Edwin F. Hill, of this city, lieutenant governor of the first division Capital Kiwanis district, yesterday presided as chairman of the conference of international district trustees, representing clubs of more than 75 members, at the convention in Atlantic City.

Charles R. Buckley, of the Fredericksburg, Va., club, and F. Berry Plummer, of the Hagerstown, Md club, both were on the discussion program. Six separate convention groups were entertained with vocal numbers by the Kiwanis trio of the Washington club, numbering Fred East, William F. Raymond and Robert S. Thomas. The convention will be addressed tomorrow by Eugene R. Woodson, of the Washington club, on the benefits of vocational guidance activities in public schools here.

Behind the Screens

With NELSON B. BELL.

IT happens, oddly enough, that this single current week is spreading before the eager vision of the dyed-in-the-white-linen fan three of the newly released prison pictures that are causing no little commotion in those communities where censorship is active.

As long as a prison play—like "The Last Mile," say—confines itself to the New York stage, it is lauded as an epic by the wardens, prison commissions, uplift societies and the like. When not one, but many, similar dramas are executed in shadows and recorded voices and spread the length of the land almost before you can holler help, it somehow doesn't seem quite the same to the professional crime experts.

"Numbered Men" and "The Big House" may be viewed and reviewed at the Metropolitan and Columbia, respectively, with no fear of molestation, deletions or ban of any sort. So, too, may "The Bad One," at the Palace, although the prison break sequence is merely incidental to the working out of a story in no way concerned with prison problems. The fact that it is a French prison in the Del Rio picture, located on an island off the coast has something to do with it also. But I mean to say, none of these will be touched here.

In New York, Ohio and other States where censorship prevails, they are kicking up a bit of a fuss not only about the three pictures now on the local screens, but also about Columbia's "The Criminal Code," Paramount's "Shadow of the Law," Fox's "Up the River" and numerous others dealing with what the producers have just discovered is a fruitful source of pungent drama.

The Will Hays office is concerned in the case of prison pictures only when, and to the extent, the Code is violated.

Surely you remember The Code!

It was interesting Saturday midnight at the Fox to note what the Fox Film Corporation got for the $500,000 it paid John McCormack for his only screen appearance to date in "Song o' My Heart." For all lovers of the great Irish tenor they got plenty.

A very interesting experiment is made in this picture. Practically devoid of plot, offering no occasion for what is usually understood by "acting," striving for no big climax or grandiose effect, "Song o' My Heart" still achieves a very definite interest from the personality as well as the voice of its star. In its naive simplicity it is as refreshing as it is apart from the usual run of films.

And John McCormack, I should say, at his customary rates, sings quite the full $500,000 worth.

It was a courageous thing to do, produce this picture with a famous star who had never before faced a camera. I hope they get their money back, for if it is the first function of the cinema to reflect accurately some aspect of actual human life, then "Song o' My Heart" is a masterpiece.

You ought to be impatient for August 29 to arrive.

Dick Liebert, playing his final week as guest organist at the Palace, is offering an especially elaborate organ-logue in "Autobiography." Tracing the supposed history of his own musical career from the first lesson to his eventual appearance as a featured organist in a theater, Dick makes use of everything on the console to pile up his effects as the composite number progresses. A pretty smart job. Ask any one.

And speaking of the Palace, they may be rough and rowdy in a good deal they do, but Doug Leavitt and Ruth Lockwood crack out a few mammies during their "Hit Bits of 1930" revue that will knock you right off the settee.

Their funniest bit, to my meager mind, is the dialogue between two elderly movie fans who are hard of hearing and seated side by side in a theater. I burst out laughing at that one right in the midst of having a tooth pulled!

The outstanding recollection you bring away from the newsreels this week is apt to be of the brief appearance of Col. Woodcock, the new Prohibition Administrator, and the few terse comments he makes upon what he construes to be his job and how he plans to go about it.

The Colonel sounds like a square-shooter and gets himself a nice hand from both the wets and the drys in the audience—if there are any wets in any theater audience!

No matter how many times you have heard it, "The Nagger," starring Mr. and Mrs. Jack Norworth, is always funny. It loses no iota of its effectiveness as a Vitaphone Variety, at the Earle, and, in addition, affords a fine chance to see what Jack and the Missus look like now that they are both getting fat.

There are certainly plenty of bootleg firecrackers out in our neighborhood, how is it by you?

$60 in Live Chickens Stolen.

A thief well versed in the art of stealing poultry noiselessly made away with six grown chickens and 50 younger ones from a henhouse at 1310 Forty-fourth street northwest, according to a report made to police yesterday morning by Clarence O. Tavenner, of that address. The loss is valued at $60.

ANTHRACITE PARLEY OPENS IN NEW YORK

Miners Oppose Wages Cut, Ask Equal Division of Working Time.

LEWIS LEADS WORKERS

New York, June 30 (A.P.).—Anthracite operators and miners today opened formal negotiations for a new wage and working agreement to replace one which has been in force since the great coal strike of 1925-26 an which expires August 31.

Six representatives have been named from each group, the miners headed by John L. Lewis, international president, and the operators by W. W. Inglis, of Scranton, president of the Glen Alden Coal Co.

At the opening session the miners presented their demands as formulated by the Hazelton, Pa., convention in May. They call for an agreement on the basis of no reduction in wages, equal division of working time among the various mines owned by one company, collection of union dues by the companies and other minor provisions. The attitude of the operators was not made known.

A statement issued at the close of the three-hour conference today, said the manifesto of the miners was discussed, as was the general economic situation of the country and the situation in the hard coal industry in particular.

None of the conferees would go beyond the former statement, but a feeling of conciliation was evident on both sides, each eager to avoid any suspension of work such as had marked wage and working discussions of the past.

Former Gov. Ross Hurt.

Huron, S. Dak., June 30 (A.P.).—Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, vice chairman of the Democratic national committee and former Governor of Wyoming, was in a Huron hospital today suffering from a fracture of her left ankle, wrenched while crossing a street last night.

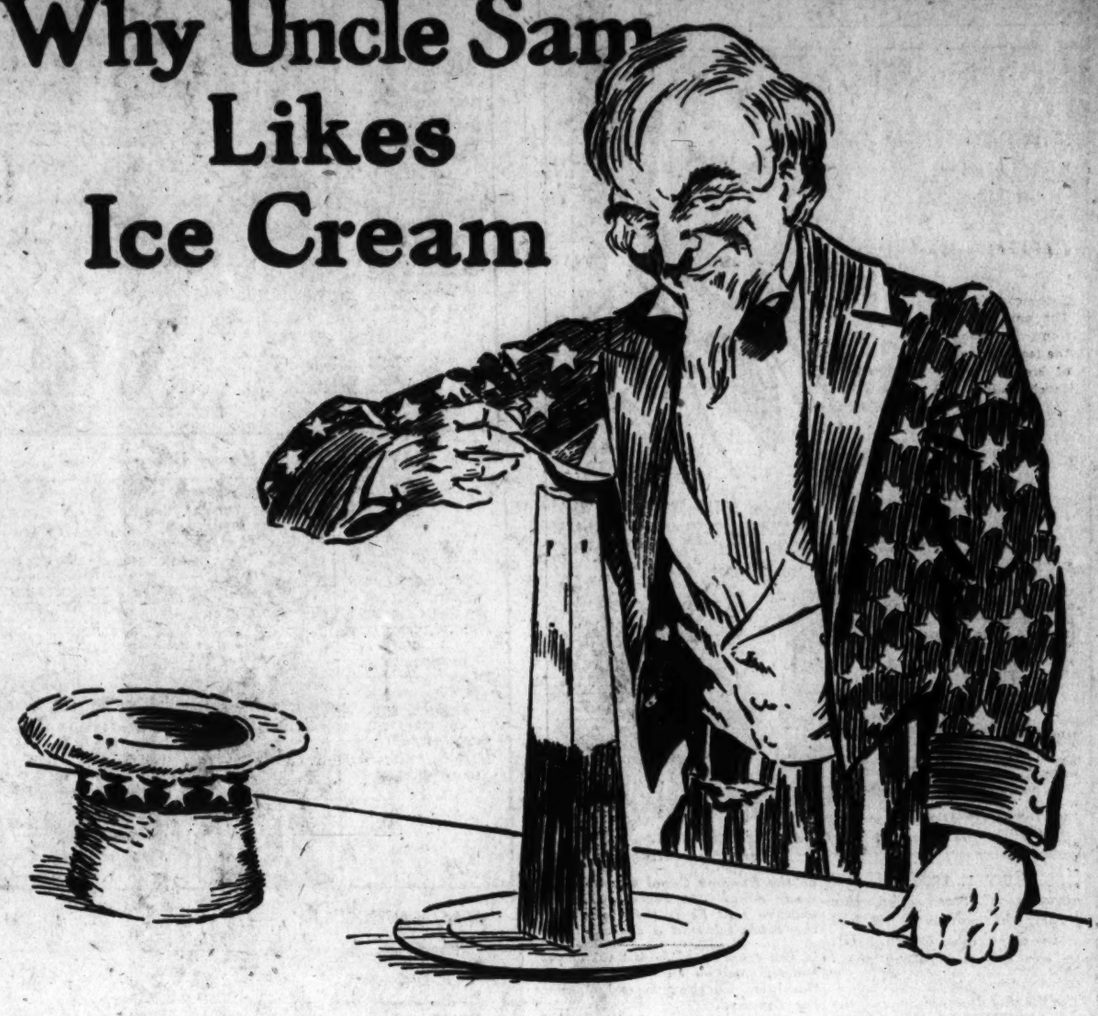
Why Uncle Sam Likes Ice Cream



IF you want to see a hungry American, you should see one on a hot day served with a dish of ice cream, in the dining-room of a European hotel.

That's when he grows really patriotic—wishes he had never left home. He gets enough ice cream to about fill a dessert spoon once.

Uncle Sam really likes ice cream—has a growing and healthful appetite for what his doctors have discovered to be the finest dessert and health-food combined ever invented.

One very special reason for his growing appetite is because he is served at the Nation's capital, and throughout Southern Dairies territory, with that "Cream of the South" known as

The Velvet Kind
ICE CREAM

Its even and constant high quality is recognized by those most competent to judge. Made in immaculate plants and by an efficient personnel, of pure, rich cream and milk—every ingredient of the highest grade. The Velvet Kind Ice Cream is recommended not only by diet specialists and health authorities, but by its unequalled excellence and deliciously smooth texture.

It goes way beyond health requirements and fully meets those of the epicure.

When does Uncle Sam like it most? Before the Fourth, after the Fourth, and right bang on the Fourth of July! Show your patriotism with at least one pint package of The Velvet Kind Ice Cream. The special for the Fourth holidays is rich, creamy FRESH PEACH!

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

(Bureau of Animal Industry.)

Cut a hog's head into four pieces. Remove the brains, ears, skin, snout and eyes. Cut off the fattest part for lard. Put the lean bony parts to soak overnight in cold water in order to extract the blood and dirt. When the head is cleaned put it over the fire to boil, using water to cover it. Boil until the meat separates readily from the bones. Then remove from the fire and pick out all the bones. Drain off the liquor, saving a part of it for future use. Chop the meat fine with a chopping knife. Return it to the kettle and pour on enough liquor to cover the meat. Let it boil slowly for 15 to 30 minutes. Season to taste with salt and pepper just before removing it from the fire. Bay leaves, a little ground cloves, and allspice may be added and boiled for a while in the soup. If not condensed enough to form jelly, a little gelatin may be dissolved in cold water and mixed well with the cheese just before filling into the cans. Pack while hot in cans within one-half inch of top. Cap, tip and process: No 2 cans 50 minutes at 250 degrees F., or 15-pound pressure. When ready to serve thoroughly chill the can before opening. Serve cold.

NATS NOSE OUT BROWNS ON 'SQUEEZE' PLAY IN 9TH, 2 TO 1; ALLISON SHOCKS NET WORLD BY TRIUMPH OVER COCHET

RECOGNIZED WORLD CHAMPION BOWS IN WIMBLEDON UPSET

Doeg and Tilden Also Gain Semifinals at Wimbledon.

Borotra Defeats Lott, Plays Tilden Today; Mrs. Moody Wins.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 30 (A.P.).—Wilmer Allison, blond whirlwind from Austin, Tex., upset the great Henri Cochet, of France, in straight sets in the quarterfinals of the British tennis championships today.

Cochet, the defending champion and recognized No. 1 player of the world, was beaten by scores of 6—4, 6—4, 6—3, in one of the most surprising matches ever witnessed here.

Although Allison has been playing brilliant tennis since his arrival in Europe with the United States Davis Cup Team, few were prepared for the wonderful exhibition of serving, driving, volleying and smashing with which he all but swept his famous opponent off his feet, probably none was more surprised than Cochet himself, who never had a chance to get started.

Two other Americans followed Allison into the semifinal round of the tournament while the potent racquet of Jean Borotra, the bounding Basque, gave the other berth to France.

Borotra Defeats Lott.

Borotra downed George Lott, of Chicago, 2—6, 6—3, 6—3, 6—4, in a match that American adherents had had far more hope of winning than the Allison-Cochet encounter. Bill Tilden trimmed Dr. J. Colin Gregory, one of England's two top ranking players, 6—1, 6—2, 6—3, and in an all-American encounter John Doeg, stalwart Davis Cup player from Santa Monica, Calif., turned back his Newark, N. J., rival, Gregory Mangin, 6—3, 1—6, 6—3, 6—4.

In the semifinals on Wednesday Allison meets Doeg and Tilden tries conclusions with Borotra, whose victory today saved the French from immediate and complete elimination from the tournament they have won for the last six years.

By his showing today Allison, former American intercollegiate champion from the University of Texas, became a strong candidate for a singles berth on the United States Davis Cup Team, although previously he had been slated only for doubles duty with Johnny Van Ryn as his partner.

Allison Ranks Seventh.

Allison ranks seventh among American singles players and had been considered at his best in doubles. He was accompanied abroad by his bride of a few months and the trip is in the nature of a honeymoon.

Against the little French marvel Allison was expected to be lucky to win a single set, but he amazed the gallery of 15,000 by playing as sensationally as he did last year in doubles when he and Van Ryn won the British title and went on to beat the French in the challenge round.

Cochet until today seemed well-nigh invincible and had not been beaten by an American since Bill Tilden performed the feat in the Davis Cup challenge round of 1927, when the French captured the trophy and John Hennessy defeated him at Forest Hills in the United States championships of the same year.

Cochet's defeat is just another story of the champion underestimating the strength and determination of youth.

The women's singles quarter finals feature tomorrow's program. Phyllis Mudford, the little English sensation who has lost fewer games in this tournament than Queen Helen herself, opposes Mrs. Helen Wills Moody in the curtain-raiser on the center court in the first quarter final match, followed by Joan Ridley, England, vs. Mme. Rene Mathieu.

Miss Ryan Plays Betty Nuthall.

Meanwhile, Elizabeth Ryan, American player living in England, meets Betty Nuthall, of England, on the No. 1 court, and this match will be followed by one between Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., and Cecilie Aussem, Germany.

Bill Tilden and his Dutch partner, Hans Timmer, oppose Mangin and Berkeley Bell, Austin, Tex., in a third-round doubles match on the center court, and Mrs. Moody and Miss Ryan play Mrs. Randolph Lycett and Mrs. J. E. Hill in the quarter finals of the women's doubles.

Mrs. Moody and Miss Ryan won easily today from Mrs. A. D. Stocks and Mrs. L. G. Owen, 6—1, 6—3, in a match that was almost totally eclipsed by the spectacular developments in the men's singles play.

3-RUN RALLY WINS, 3-1, FOR A'S

Triple by Foxx Puts Macks Ahead of Tigers in 8th.

PHILADELPHIA, June 30 (A.P.).—A three-run rally in the eighth combined with Eddie Rommel's great pitching gave the world's champion Philadelphia Athletics a 3-to-1 decision over the Detroit Tigers today.

Vic Sorrell had the Mackmen blanked until the eighth, when Mickey Cochrane led off with his fourth single of the game. Simmons followed with another single and both scored on Foxx's triple. Foxx added the third run on a squeeze bunt engineered by Jimmy Dykes.

Singles by Gehringer and Alexander and Stone's sacrifice fly in the sixth saved the Tigers from a shutout.

Braves Beat Pirates, Lloyd Waner in Action

Pittsburgh, June 30 (A.P.).—Rallying after Pittsburgh had swept away their early lead, Boston tallied twice in the eighth today to defeat the Pirates, 6 to 5. Richbourg's single with the bases loaded gave the Braves their tieing and winning runs.

The Pirates threatened in the eighth and ninth but could do little with Seibold. The victory sent the Braves into fifth place ahead of the Pirates.

BROWNS LONG "POISON" TO NATS

Broke Streak of Johnson in 1912; Crowder to Pitch.

THOSE pesky St. Louis Browns will be in our midst again this afternoon when the third game of the four-game set will be played. Bill Killefer's team isn't going anywhere itself but it certainly is proving to be a stumbling block in the path of the Nationals, having won six of the nine games played between the two teams so far this season. This condition is nothing new, however, for the St. Louis Team invariably has been rank poison for the Nationals for years.

By beating the Nationals Sunday, they snapped a winning streak which had extended to eight games while these same Browns were the first team to take a series from the Nats this season. In several previous years, they have bobbed up and hurt the Nats while back between 1912 and 1914 they smashed two record streaks of Walter Johnson.

One was a stretch of 56 scoreless innings which the present Nat leader had hurled while the other, which later caused a rule change, broke Johnson's winning streak of 16 games. In those days, a pitcher hammered off the peak was not charged with the men on bases when he retired, the relief pitcher being repsonsible.

When the "Old Master" entered the game which saw his streak broken, two Brownies were on the runways, and a hump-back bounder over Johnson's head went to center field and let the runners score, these two runs being just enough to win and, under rules existing at that time, to charge Johnson with the loss. The next season, the present rule, of making the knocked-out pitcher responsible for

Atlantans Invade Gotham To Welcome Bobby Jones

NEW YORK, June 30 (A.P.).—Bobby Jones, champion of golf champions, will get such a reception when he returns from Europe Wednesday as New York hasn't seen for some time if his fellow Georgians can make it so.

The advance contingent of a welcoming army from Atlanta arrived today by airplane to confer with Grover Whalen, the city's official greeter, on plans for Bobby's homecoming party.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa G. Candler, Hunter Terry, Atlanta real estate man, and Ralph Smith, representing the Atlanta Journal, landed at Newark, N. J., airport this afternoon after a five-hour flight from the super golfer's old home town.

Following them by special train were several hundred more of Bobby's admirers.

Their plans and those of Mr. Whalen are to take Bobby off the Europa at Quarantine on the municipal tug Macom, parade up the harbor, give him a ride up Broadway and a welcome from Mayor Walker at City Hall. The several hundred Atlanta members of the welcoming party have chartered the excursion steamer Mandalay and will be right along with the Macom in the marine parade.

Bobby's plans after he reaches New York are unknown, but he has an invitation, or will have one when he arrives, to use the Candler plane to fly to Minneapolis for the national open tournament, which opens July 10.

Atlanta, Ga., June 30 (A.P.).—Many prominent Atlantans left for New York today to welcome Bobby Jones home from Great Britain, but the celebration of the famous golfer's English conquests meant little to Robert Tyre Jones 3d.

"Somebody please tell my daddy I can whistle now," Bobby's 3-year-old son shouted as the 100 or more members of the delegation milled about excitedly before the "Bobby Jones Special" pulled away from the station. The youngest Bobby and his 5-year-old sister, Clara, accompanied their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Jones, to the train. The children did not make the trip and must save their welcome until their father returns from the American open tournament at Minneapolis.

The special train, an extra section of the Southern Railway's Crescent Limited, left here shortly after noon with only a few stops scheduled before it reaches New York about 1 p. m. tomorrow. Members of the Georgia congressional delegation were expected to join the train at Washington.

Ruth Hits 30th Home Run as Yanks Win

Braxton and Thomas Yield 19 Hits in 15-4 Defeat.

White Sox, at Worst, Add to Woes of Moundsmen.

NEW YORK, June 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.)—Just why the Chicago White Sox, a team which started with bright prospects in the springtime, are now in last place was made apparent to a small crowd of 10,000 at the Yankee Stadium today when the young men of Donie Bush did everything to baseballs tossed out by the umpires except catch, throw and hit them.

Topped off by the thirtieth home run of Babe Ruth's fiscal year, the Yankees did a lot of hitting themselves—nineteen wallops, all the way from popflies uncaught to Ruth's tempestuous stroke, which went 425 feet against a strong wind to get out of the ball yard.

Two pitchers, E. Garland Braxton, once a Yank and later of the Washington Senators, and Alphonse Thomas, felt the weight of the Shawkey sticks. The final score was 15 to 4.

In four frames, from the fourth through the seventh, the Yanks rang up three runs an inning. That's twice they've done that trick now in a week's time.

A block of three is their favorite method of progression. Harry Rice made four of the nineteen hits, Ruth had three, and almost every one helped.

George Pipgras went through a nine-inning game with no real trouble. He was crowned for three runs by the Sox in the seventh, but that was too late to do any damage or cause Manager Shawkey to worry about the bullpen. The Sox made only eight hits in all. A sterling catch by Ruth in that seventh steadied Pipgras when he was in danger, and altogether the Yankees looked impressive beside the sloppy work of their opponents.

Ruth 12 Days Ahead Of His Record Year

New York, June 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.). When Babe Ruth straightened out one of Al Thomas' shoots in the seventh inning of today's game at the stadium with the White Sox, he registered his thirtieth home run of the current season. The drive put him five homers and twelve days ahead of his record, made in 1927.

The Babe's thirtieth of that year was made on July 12 against Shaute, of Cleveland. He made his thirty-first against Thomas the following day. On June 30, 1927, Ruth hit his twenty-fifth home run against Harriss, of the Red Sox. Today's clout brought the Babe's total for the month of June up to fifteen.

BUNT BY MARBERRY SENDS JUDGE HOME TO DECIDE THRILLER

Firpo Allows 4 Hits to Beat Blaeholder in Tight Duel.

Browns' Run Comes on Kress' Homer; Error Aids Nats.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

FRED MARBERRY and George Blaeholder yesterday delved back into baseball history and tore a page from the chapter entitled "Memories," staging an old-fashioned pitching duel which saw the Nationals even up the series with the St. Louis Browns by turning in a 2-to-1 victory. Only about 4,000 cash customers turned out to witness one of the best games staged in the Griffith Stadium in a long time.

As both the first-place Mackmen and the Yankees, who are tied with the Johnsons for second place in the pennant fight, also won, this home victory was needed to let the Nats hold their own for the day.

Marberry Proves Versatile.

Marberry not only was the pitching hero, but he also took practically all other honors of the day, for it was a neatly executed "squeeze" play with one dead and the bases loaded in the final frame which let Joe Judge cross the platter with the winning run. Of course, Judge, who singled with one out; Bluege, who doubled him to third, and Rice, up for Spencer, who was intentionally walked, are entitled to some credit for getting on the paths, but it is the stick work which actually gets the runners over the plate which counts, and that's where Marberry came in.

The big pitcher came through with his tap on the first ball pitched and with every member of the St. Louis infield anticipating the bunt, yet being unable to do anything to stop it.

Only four hits were molded from Marberry's offerings and the only reason that the enemy scored was because one of these was a lusty home run deep into the left field stands starting the fifth round. This blow tied the score, for the Nats had previously broken the ice in the second.

Kress Makes Up For Error.

Kress' homer merely was making up for his error which was responsible for the Nats' second-round marker. Cronin led off with a single in this session, took second on Har-

IN THE WAKE OF THE GAME

CRONIN gave the Browns hope of getting off to a good start when he fumbled Lu Blue's roller, opening the game. This hurt the Nats none, however, for Badgro popped to Bluege, and Goslin then hit into a force play and later died stealing.

In the second inning Bluege shot one at Kress, which would have been a hit had it not been headed directly at the visiting shortfielder.

Melillo had to tear in at a mile-a-minute clip for Cronin's high pop, ending the home third with Manush on third.

Blue moaned long and loud when Umpire Geisel called a third strike on him opening the alien fourth.

When Goslin singled with two dead in the fourth, it was his first safety since his appearance here in St. Louis livery. He then decided to have a little fun trying to tease Marberry by taking an extra long lead. The Nat pitcher had the last laugh, however, for, after pegging twice trying to pick off the Goose, he finally nailed him, much to the delight of the small assemblage.

The Nat bench warmers were responsible for Kress' homer coming in the fifth. Just previous to this clout, he popped a foul which Joe Judge could have caught near the Washington dugout if some of his mates had not stopped the first baseman, fearing that he would fall down the steps. Their judgment was bad, for Joe could have made the catch at little or no risk of injury.

Sammy West went all the way to left field to drag down Melillo's hard-hit looper in the fifth. Then, to end the frame, Myer went back in West's territory to make a nice catch of Ferrell's near Texas leaguer.

Marberry did some fancy fielding ending the enemy sixth. He took Goslin's slow roller with his gloved hand and, having little time to peg to Judge, who was almost on top of him, he chased over to first himself to beat the runner. Badgro was on at the time as a result of Marberry's first pass of the game.

Umpire Tommy Connolly almost got run over when he failed to get out of Manush's way on the left fielder's double opening Washington's sixth.

Blaeholder pulled a highway robbery stunt at Marberry's expense in round 7, taking his rival's liner at arm's length with his gloved hand.

Hale replaced O'Rourke on third in the Nats' sixth. He is the player President Griffith claimed on waivers last week, the Browns then changing their mind and keeping him. Hale

SILVERDALE WINS ARLINGTON'S OPENING FEATURE

McLean Colt Wins Third In Row

Pigeon Hole Second, Golden Prince Next Over Line.

Illegitimate Scores in Feature at Latonia.

CHICAGO, June 30 (A.P.).—Silverdale, E. B. McLean's consistent 4-year-old colt by The Porter—Margaret Odgen, once more carried his colors to victory when he won the Arlington Inaugural Handicap, the opening feature today, thereby registering his third straight win. H. P. Headley's Pigeon Hole was second and A. B. Bartelstein's Golden Prince was third, the latter two being grouped in the field.

The race was for 3-year-olds and up over the 7 furlongs, and carried a net value of $9,000 to the winner, $1,500 to second, $780 to third and $250 to the fourth horse. Silverdale covered the distance in 1:24 4-5 and was coupled with Jock as the E. B. McLean entry, which paid $8.18 for $2 in the mutuels.

Silverdale, away fast and rated along under slight restraint, disposed of Current after passing the quarter-mile pole and, forging ahead on the outside of Cayuga, headed the latter just around the stretch turn, drew clear and won easily by two and a half lengths. Pigeon Hole was away fast, but allowed to drop back right after the start, then gradually worked his way up and, closing strongly, was an easy second, two lengths in front of Golden Prince. Golden Prince was rated along nicely while gradually gaining, but was doing his best to outfinish Live Oak by a nose.

Illegitimate Scores At Latonia.

Latonia, Ky., June 30 (A.P.).—The Beech Hill Purse, the best offering of the afternoon racing which was fourth on the program, a sprint of 6 furlongs, was won by Illegitimate. Agincourt was second and General Grant third. The time was 1:13 4-5. Jockey K. Russell, who had the mount, rated Illegimate close to the heels of Agincourt which led the field until midway up the home stretch, where Russell gave the word and Illegitimate responded and won by two lengths.

Agincourt took the place by a length and a half from General Grant. The winner paid $8.52 for $2 mutuel tickets.

Aqueduct Feature To Lahor.

Aqueduct Race Track, N. Y., June 30 (A.P.).—The last week of racing on Long Island began here today with the running off of a brilliant card. Saturday the Empire City meeting opens for a 21-day session and then the ponies will depart for Saratoga for the month of August.

The Old Rosebud Claiming Handicap was the feature of the day's program, and it resulted in a very easy victory for the Rancocas Stable's Lahor, with Laverne Fator up. He was a well played favorite, closing at even money. Fator got him away on his toes and let the colt race along about a length or so in front. Hacky H., and Tony Joe both challenged the winner but he simply breezed away to win by one and a half lengths, running the 8 furlongs in 1:39 2-5. Tony Joe beat Hacky H., a neck for the place.

Boots and Saddle's

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)

—Latonia Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

LATONIA features the Mount Echo Purse, VERMICULITE being the choice from the large field, with BUD CHARLTON and PETER DIXON the probable contenders. VERMICULITE runs well enough to keep everybody guessing and is invariably backed well. It is time for some results. There is no decided favorite possible in a field of this kind. BUD CHARLTON has not been running in best, but can be counted upon to be close up with any horse in the race.

The first race is for 3-year-old maidens, colts and geldings. POLINOS looks much the best. The contender will be OSWEGO if both start. The latter may be the favorite, due to the recent failure of POLINOS. But POLINOS is ready for brackets and is coupled with FRIGATE BIRD as the J. N. Camden entry. RED CACTUS should take the show money.

The second race has the smallest field on the card, but should be a close contest. Camden will have a chance to score a double if he wins this race with HONEY LOCUST and the first race with a standout horse. STOCK MARKET beat this kind a few days ago, but HONEY LOCUST has plenty of speed and may turn the tables. Third money seems to lie between FIDDLER, a disappointment in the spring, and OVERBOARD.

The third race may develop into the most exciting of the day. It is for 2-year-old fillies, and there are some good ones. MARY COBB is selected to win, but she has been far off form in Chicago. If she runs back to her spring form, there will be nothing to it. PLUMAGE is probably next best, and should beat ANN CLAY for the place. PATSY CARTER may be rated too low, and SUGAR KISS also has an outside chance.

SPOTLIGHT is well placed in the fifth race, which also is for fillies. She will have nothing more dangerous than DRAHA to beat and should be able to do so easily. MISS SCOTIA is tabbed for third. SPOTLIGHT has been running with better horses, and being dropped below her class, should win.

CARAMEL will have BROOKDALE MISS to beat in the sixth race. BUSINESS will have a following and should be no worse than third. There is no great amount of preference among the three, all of which are better than the others in the mile and 70 yards race.

SHARK is selected in the seventh. BRUNO looks like the only one of the lot to offer serious contention. PERCENTAGE has been failing so consistently among this sort that third will be about the best he can do in this event.

Arlington Park is introducing steeplechasing and has a jumping race on its program today. AUTUMN BELLS, BROWN STOUT, THE ACE II and other Eastern horses are engaged. It is difficult to make steeplechasing stick in the West. Kentucky abandoned it years ago, but it remains popular in New York, Maryland and other Eastern States. AUTUMN BELLS should win this race.

Blue Larkspur was defeated in an ordinary field yesterday at Arlington.

MARGARET SCOTT raced under steadying restraint to final stretch, moved up steadily when called upon and went into the lead a sixteenth out and drew clear. CAPTAIN J. S. gradually disposed of LADY WITT, saved ground into stretch, but faltered when challenged for the winner. MY NO, a factor from the start, held on well to the drive to outfinish ROYAL SON. Latter closed a big gap in final quarter. CAPTAIN J. S. and LADY WITT raced each other into submission.

BELEN, well up from start, responded gamely when ready and, steadied along, gradually wore CACKLE down to draw out clear. GRADISET, also forward from start, held on gamely under pressure and, saving ground on inside, outlasted CACKLE when the latter closed up dangerously midway of stretch, then faltered slightly right at the end. CACKLE tired up dangerously midway of stretch, then faltered slightly when put to a drive. SMYRNA, forced wide entering stretch, closed stoutly when straightened out. JEAN MAC broke slowly.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:16. Off at 3:21½. Winner, C. C. Wilson Livestock Co.'s ch. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MRS. FOSTER, $14.02, $6.02, $3.92; ZETA, $4.54, $3.16; ESTIN, $3.16.

MRS. FOSTER was hustled into contention at the break, went to front under light urging and, continuing strongly, had much in reserve at end. ZETA assumed the lead right after the start, held on stubbornly when challenged and continued well, but could not match stables with winner. ESTIN, prominent from start, but forced wide on turn, closed well through the stretch and easily held others safe. KING AT ARMS closed resolutely. WOODLOT was in this race all the trip.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,300; allowances. The Beech Hill. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:47. Off at 3:48½. Winner, H. Otis' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ILLEGITIMATE, $8.52, $4.06, $2.96; AGINCOURT, $3.42, $2.26; GENERAL GRANT, $4.18.

ILLEGITIMATE, away fast and under stout restraint to the final three-sixteenths, where steadily disposing of AGINCOURT, drew out decisively. AGINCOURT saved all possible ground while under pressure, swerved out slightly when tiring in final eighth, then closed well when straight again. GENERAL GRANT saved ground entering stretch, responded gamely under punishment, but could not seriously threaten leaders. ELLICE was always outpaced.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and seventy yards. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good; place, driving. Went to post at 4:17. Off at 4:18. Winner, R. L. Gaddis' b. f. (3), by Playfellow—Hildred. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $900; second, $200; third, $100. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:42 1-5, 1:47 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR PLAY, $58.56, $22.14, $10.40; GO TO IT, $4.26, $3.12; NETTIE PEBBLES, $3.66.

STAR PLAY, under clever handling and rated along closely behind the early pace, assumed command at head of the stretch, began drawing out, then a brush when ready and, drawing out midway of the stretch, had enough left to hold GO TO IT safe. Latter, well up under steadying restraint to final stretch, moved up on latter when urged and, taking command at head of the stretch, began drawing out. AIMEE GOLDSMITH was sent into a long early lead, held away under steadying restraint, but could not resist winner's bid when challenged. ROYAL SPORT was taken extremely wide through stretch, but closed strongly when straightened again. ROYAL YEOMAN, pinched back on the first turn, closed much ground in final quarter, but could never reach contention. JAMES M., in close quarters for five-eighths, weakened when clear.

HEDEKIN ELIMINATES VAN VLIET IN ARMY SURPRISE

Net Champion Defeated in Tourney

Favorite Beaten by 7-5, 7-5, 9-7 at Columbia.

Strahan Also Gains Finals; Rivals to Play Today.

By JACK ESPEY.

LIEUT. DAVID D. HEDEKIN, who gained much of his early experience on the Capital's public park courts, scored one of the most sensational upsets in the history of the Army tennis tournament yesterday when he defeated the defending singles champion, Maj. Robert C. Van Vliet, jr., three times winner of the title, in a hotly contested three set semifinal match at Columbia Country Club. The scores were 7—5, 7—5, 9—7.

Thus Lieut. Hedekin reached the finals of the Army tournament for the second time in three years of competition, and established himself as one of the leading netmen among Uncle Sam's military officers. In 1927, Hedekin went to the final only to be beaten by Lieut. J. W. Strahan.

By a strange coincidence, Hedekin and Strahan again will clash in the final, for Strahan defeated Lieut. S. K. Robinson, 6—4, 6—1, 6—4, in the other semifinal match yesterday. The struggle for the championship will take place today, starting at 2:30 o'clock.

Hedekin Takes Early Command.

Despite the fact that he had flashed an improvement in his game this year, Lieut. Hedekin was not considered the equal of Maj. Van Vliet. The defending title holder was regarded an overwhelming favorite to win. But it wasn't long after the match started that Hedekin took command, and to the utter amazement of the gallery he stayed out in front.

Lieut. Hedekin, whose home is in Battery Park, Md., is stationed at Fort Benning, Ga. He was graduated from West Point in 1927. Prior to entering the Military Academy he performed here in the Suburban Tennis League and in the Public Parks League.

A clever net game proved the biggest factor in his triumph over the veteran Van Vliet. Time after time Hedekin rushed forward following a forcing shot to Van Vliet's backhand to volley over precious points. He also flashed a twisting service that gave his older foe plenty of trouble.

Hedekin Annexes First Set.

The tip-off on what was to follow came in the first set when Hedekin twice overhauled Van Vliet and then won the set. Maj. Van Vliet took the lead at 3—1, and, after seeing this wiped out went ahead at 5—3. Hedekin won the ninth game on his service and broke through Van Vliet's in the tenth to square the set. He then won the eleventh, a marathon affair, and once more blasted Van Vliet's delivery in the twelfth game to gain the decision.

Van Vliet at no time lost heart. In the second set he drew level at 4—4 after trailing by three games. In the third set the major threatened to turn the tide, but, after going ahead at 7—6 succumbed to Hedekin's deadly angle shots at the net.

Lieut. Robinson failed to give Lieut. Strahan as much opposition as had been anticipated, and the former champion never lost the lead after going ahead at 6—5 on Robinson's service in the first set.

Robinson did make one sensational stand when he interrupted his rival's streak in the third set, to win the fifth and sixth games at love.

Mehalic Hurls Perfect Game for Traction Nine

Steve Mehalic hurled a no-hit, no-run game for the Capital Traction Nine against the Union Carmen in the Terminal Y. Morning League, his team winning, 10 to 0. Mehalic also hammered out four hits in as many times at bat.

Capital Traction won the first half championship and is well on its way toward a second-half title.

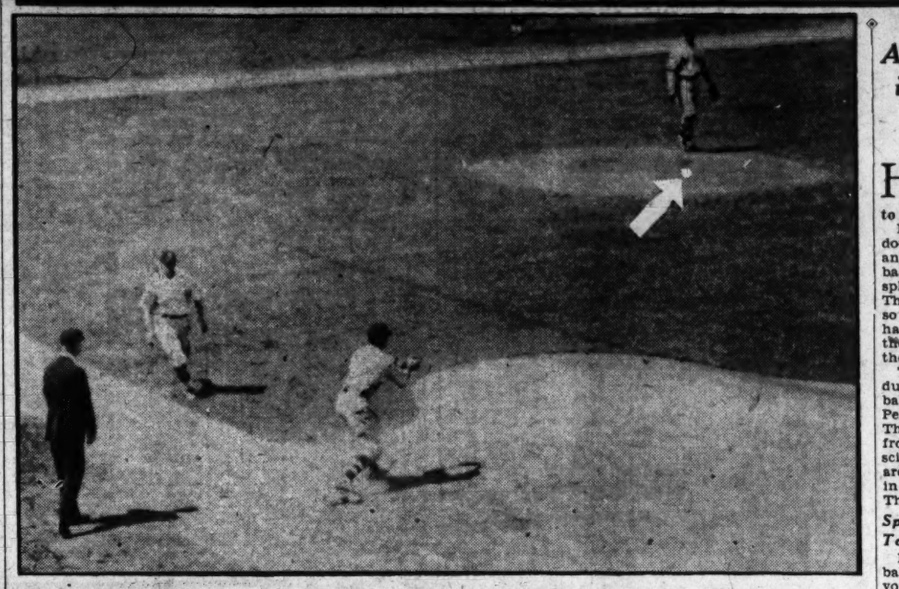
"SPOT THE BALL" AND SEE FRIDAY'S DOUBLE-HEADER



Mrs. McFarland Wins Contest No. 10 as Fair Fans Score Double in The Post's Popular Game

SCORE a double for the fair fans. Mrs. M. J. McFarland, housewife and baseball fan, of North Braddock, Va., followed Miss Anne Richter, yesterday's winner, in showing the way to the legion of "Spot the Ball" fans. Mrs. McFarland, with cries of her friends, will be the guest of The Washington Post at today's game between the Browns and Nats.

Mrs. McFarland's victory was the most unusual of the contest to date, as her winning X was five-sixteenths of an inch from the correct spot. The ball revealed by the arrow in the picture above (at bottom) proved the most elusive thus far. Few fans came within proximity of the correct spot and only J. B. Johnson, of 1146 Abbey place northeast, furnished close contention.

The ball as revealed above was in flight when caught by the cameraman, evidently having been thrown by the third baseman. Although it appears to be near the pitcher's box it was in reality much nearer the first baseman.

Early solutions to the No. 11 "Spot the Ball" contest, which appeared in yesterday's Post, also indicate that The Post cameraman is making it more difficult for the fans. This contest closes tonight at 6 p. m. and the winner will receive four box seats for tomorrow's series finale between the Browns and Nats.

Another Test Offered in The Post's Popular Contest.

HERE'S plenty of action for you "Spot the Ball" fans. The action photo above leaves plenty to the imagination.

Four box seats to Friday's holiday double-header between the Yanks and Nats await the fan finding the ball or coming nearest to finding the sphere in the picture above (at top). There will be no game here Thursday, so the winner of contest No. 12 will have the good fortune of witnessing the Fourth of July bargain bill as the guest of The Post.

The photo was taken yesterday during the progress of the heated battle between the Browns and Nats. Perhaps you remember the play. There is Fred Marberry racing over from the box. You see Joe Judge scintillating off of first base and there are Bluege, Cronin and Myer coming in from their respective positions. The only thing missing is the ball.

Spot It and Mail It To The Post.

Mark the spot where you think the ball should be with an X and mail your choice to the "Spot the Ball" Editor of The Post with your name and address attached.

Due to the fact that there will be no game here Thursday, an extra day will be allotted contestants in which to submit solutions to the problem above. Be sure that your selection is in the office of "Spot the Ball" Editor before 6 p. m. Thursday. The winner will be notified Thursday night by telegraph.

CROWDER TO FACE ST. LOUIS TODAY

the runners he put on base, was adopted.

Crowder to Face Browns.

In the hope of copping this afternoon's game and taking a lead in the set, "General" Alvin Crowder will toil on the hill against his former mates. He should have beaten them when he faced them in St. Louis the day after he was traded to the Nats, along with Heinie Manush for Goose Goslin, but faltered slightly in the ninth and then came an error which suddenly ended the game after the Nats had entered this final frame one run in front. Sammy Gray is slated to draw the assignment from Manager Killefer.

According to Umpire "Bull" Guthrie, "there ain't no close ones; it's either dis or dat," but this is not exactly the case, as was proven by the play which ended Sunday's game so unsatisfactorily. Joe Cronin, it will be remembered, dropped a short foul back of third and O'Rourke and Kress both raced for it, the third baseman just getting his hands on the ball and dropping it when Kress charged into him. Umpire Campbell ruled it a "momentary" catch, which it was—most "momentary."

Possible Riot In the Making.

A possible riot was in the making, as several hundred fans rushed on the field, and but for interference by some of the players Campbell might have been assaulted. E. S. Barnard, league head, has particularly warned his "guessers" not to give favorable decisions on "momentary" catches unless there is absolutely no doubt tha the ball was held sufficient time to justify it being ruled a legal catch.

As to the ruling which threatened trouble Sunday, Umpires Campbell and Connolly, who confirmed the decision, seem to be the only ones of the 14,000 present who thought O'Rourke's catch was legal. In the writer's opinion—and that of many others with whom he has talked—the baseball powers that be could benefit the game by scratching the word "momentary" out of the rule book. This would make plays of this kind open and shut ones—either the ball would be caught or missed, with all element of doubt eliminated.

It was because of another of these "momentary" catch rulings, in a game in Washington and against the Browns, that President Barnard warned the umpires to make doubly sure that the ball was held a few seconds before a legal catch was allowed. Many fans probably remember the occasion three years ago when, with Goslin on first, Ruel lined to Schulte, who grabbed the ball, but immediately dropped it when he started to throw.

Goslin Goes to Second.

Goslin kept on to second and McGowan called him safe. Then the Browns claimed a "momentary" catch and, after a conference between Connolly and Barry, the latter umpire in chief for the day, the catch was allowed, the ball thrown to first, and Goslin declared out, too. Here was a case where Goslin was supposed to anticipate a decision at which the umpires were unable to arrive except by a conference. A protest on this game would have been allowed if made, the league head stated later.

Adams, a right-handed pitcher who starred with the University of Richmond, is trying for a berth with the Nationals. He showed lots of stuff in his workout yesterday.

"Sad Sam" Jones, veteran pitcher who has been out because of illness for some time, took a strenuous workout yesterday, at its conclusion advising Pilot Johnson that he will be ready to start in one of the games of Friday's Independence Day doubleheader with the Yankees.

District Title Net Tourney Entries to Close Tomorrow

LOCAL tennis players have until tomorrow at 6 p. m. to place their entries for the annual District championship tournament in the hands of Joe Rutley, tournament chairman, at 4722 Davenport street northwest. That hour has been set as the deadline for entries and will be rigidly observed. Pairings for the event, which opens Friday morning at 10 o'clock, will be made tomorrow night.

As the starting hour draws nearer, tennis fans are speculating as to the singles winner. Many believe that it will be Bob Considine, 23-year-old George Washington University captain, whose short career has been thickly studded with brilliant accomplishments. Others forecast that the title will fall to Dooly Mitchell, Georgetown University star, while still some predict that the veteran Tom Mangan, who won the title in 1924, will again wear the champion's crown.

Considine or Mitchell Favored.

It seems, however, that the majority of observers, particularly those who actually watch every tournament held here, exclude everybody from consideration for the title but Considine and Mitchell. This goes for Clarence Charest, the one-armed veteran who won the District title last year. They say that Charest is far below his usual standard of playing condition, owing to lack of practice.

Word was received yesterday from Lieut. D. C. Redgrave, of Annapolis, that most of the Navy Leech Cup players will enter the tournament. It is expected that several of the Army Leech Cup netmen also will compete.

Six Baltimore Players Are Entered.

Six Baltimore players already have filed entries. They are Billy Jacobs, Middle Atlantic junior singles champion; Louis Kurland, Baltimore City champion; Alex Kelles, Ed LePleur, Bob Elliott and Elmer Rudy.

In spite of the considerable number of out-of-town players who will be in action, local critics do not hesitate to predict that a Washingtonian will take the title. And, as said before, Considine and Mitchell are the prognosticators' fair-haired boys.

French Champs Wed As Nation Is Thrilled

Paris, June 30 (A.P.).—Rene La Coste, France's tennis idol, and Mlle. Simone Thion de la Chaume, the premier woman golfer of France, were married in the Church of Ste. Clothilde at noon today.

La Coste, former world tennis champion, and also a golfer of note, received the congratulations of all France, as did his bride.

The modernity of the 1930 costumes was tempered by the medieval pageantry of the Catholic Church, making the affair one of the most impressive wedding spectacles Paris has seen in many years. Mlle. Simone was attired all in white satin and tulle.

ris' out and third on Judge's scratch single near second. He scored when Kress, after having taken Judge's roller with his gloved hand, followed through with a wide throw, a useless one, too, for he had no chance of catching Judge at first.

In the third Manush tripled with two out and was left and this was the only other Washington threat until the sixth, when Manush led off with a double. He advanced on Cronin's neat sacrifice but could get no further help from his mates.

All told, Blaeholder granted but eight hits and kept them well scattered. But for the tainted run Kress' error gave the Nats earlier in the game, his slight weakening in the ninth might have netted him no worse than a tie and made extra innings necessary.

In addition to his bunt which broke up the game, but which would have been an out had Blaeholder thrown to first, Marberry was credited with a single. Judge cracked out two one-basers, while Manush had a triple and double to represent his work at the tee. Besides Kress' round tripper, a double by O'Rourke and singles by Hale and Goslin made up the entire allen attack.

STOCK PRICES RALLY SHARPLY; QUIET DAY

Leading Issues Gain 3 to 6 Points as 1,843,000 Shares Are Sold.

FOREIGN SECTION EASES

New York, June 30 (A.P.).—The stock market ended the first half of the year today on a rally supplied by short covering. Trading was the dullest since early in the month. Nevertheless it was the first time in many days that the market had progressed steadily upward from gong to gong, uninterrupted by a selling flurry.

Most of the buying, which lifted numbers of leading shares 3 to 6 points net, appeared to come from the smaller and more timid members of the bear group, for the 1,843,000-share turnover hardly indicated a particularly vigorous covering movement. It was reported that some of the large operators who have been on the short side were satisfied to hold their position for a while longer, until the price levels had been further tested.

The theory that the market had become oversold on the basis of business indices so far available seemed to be growing. Although few were willing to venture the opinion that further efforts to mark stocks down would be abandoned, much depends, apparently, on the character of the news from commerce and industry in the next few weeks, and it is agreed in brokerage circles that particularly unfavorable developments, apart from normal summer recessions, would be disquieting.

Call Money Firmer.

Call money firmed. Renewing at 2 per cent, the rate was raised first to 2½ and then to 3 as banks and corporations withdrew funds in preparation for the month-end requirements for interest and dividends, as well as for pay rolls and other expenditures. Loan calling today was estimated at close to $150,000,000, part of which doubtless represented the return of money to interior lenders who saw no attraction in the recent low levels.

Investors tomorrow will start receiving close to a billion dollars in dividend checks and coupons. Although bankers are disposed to regard the so-called reinvestment as more or less theoretical, part of the returns from invested capital does flow back into securities and in a quiet market such purchases might easily be felt.

Many of today's prices were especially interesting in comparison with those of last week, when stocks were making new lows. Allied Chemical, up 16 points, closed 39 points above its recent minimum. Eastman Kodak had rallied 24 from the bottom, J. I. Case 22, Atchison 12, American Telephone 10 and U. S. Steel 8. The last named touched 160 after a long absence from that figure and showed a net advance of more than 3 points.

Southern Railway Rises.

Stocks up 3 to 4 points included American Telephone, Electric Power & Light, North American, National Biscuit, American Tobacco "B," General Electric and Public Service of New Jersey. Westinghouse rallied 6, consolidated Gas 5, Eastman Kodak nearly 9, Atchison 8 and Case 10. New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio, Pennsylvania, Southern Railway, Sears Roebuck, General Motors, Radio, Radio-Keith-Orpheum and Standard Oil of New Jersey, among many others, gained one to two. There were signs of pool operations in some of the lower priced shares, especially in the late trading when Hahn Department Stores rose more than 3 and Bockway Motor almost 7 points.

Grains moved against the trend of stocks. Wheat closed 1½ to 1¼ cents lower in sympathy with the weak Liverpool market, large receipts and reports of rains in the Northwest. Corn lost about a cent, reflecting bearish private crop estimates. Cotton closed slightly lower.

News was meager. A compilation of May earnings of 73 railroads showed a decline of 32.5 per cent in net operating income as compared with a year ago, but slightly better than the April figures. The May increase in net over April was nearly $4,000,000, while gross rose $9,000,000.

Figures on the output of electricity last month by eight Midwestern utilities represented a decline of 11.6 per cent from 1930 and of about 2 per cent from April.

Foreign exchanges eased, pointing to a flow of funds in this direction, perhaps for employment here. Sterling eased as much as a quarter of a cent, ruled at $4.86 for cables, off ¼.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, June 30 (A.P.).—Trading in cotton was very quiet today, with an early decline under liquidation and scattered local selling, followed by rallies on covering. July contracts, after selling at 13.63 at the start, declined to 13.41 and closed at 13.46, or 13 points net lower, while the new October, after selling off to 12.93, rallied to 13.03 and closed at 12.98, compared with 13.02 at the close of Saturday. The general market closed steady at a net decline of 13 points on July and 2 to 5 points on October and later deliveries.

The market opened steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 11 points, under selling, which seemed to be prompted by the outlook for unsettled weather with showers in some parts of the South. The relatively steady showing of Liverpool brought in enough buying to absorb the initial offerings and hold the market fairly steady right after the call, but the circulation of a few additional July notices caused a little near-month liquidation.

Offerings of new-crop months also increased following the official forecasts, which were in line with the early reports of prospects for unsettled weather, with possible showers, and the market worked off a few points late in the morning. The old October sold down to 13.21 and the new December to 13.10, making net declines of about 5 to 10 points on the new crop positions but the selling was light and the market steadied up during the afternoon on covering or rebuying. The old October advanced to 13.28 and closed at 13.25, while the new December advanced to 13.18 and closed at 13.15.

Some of the private reports reaching here from the South commented rather favorably on the higher temperatures of last week, but the failure of this and the more favorable view of the weather outlook to bring in general selling was a disappointment to early sellers which probably accounted for part of the afternoon buying, the July notices issued here were estimated at about 2,500 bales including deliveries at Savannah.

Liverpool cables said American selling had been absorbed by continental buying in that market. Port receipts today 4,940. United States port stocks, 1,665,203. Exports, 10,701, making 6,649,164 so far this season.

BOND PRICES CLIMB IRREGULARLY HIGHER

Stock Rebound Adds Firmer Tone to Convertible, Warrant Issues.

PRIME DOMESTICS QUIET

New York, June 30 (A.P.).—The listed bond market showed greater stability in a dull trading session today. The sustained rally in stocks gave a firm tone to convertible and warrant issues, and the influence of easy credit asserted itself on a wide list of corporation and foreign bonds. Prime domestic issues were sluggish.

The trend was irregularly higher with legal issues the dullest spot in the domestic list. Figuring of call money, which advanced to 3 per cent, was believed to have retarded sales, which were the smallest in more than a week. Tightening of rates was incident to withdrawal of funds for interest, dividend and maturity payments, part of which is expected to flow into bonds.

Gains among convertible bonds were confined to small fractions with a few notable exceptions. Atchison 4½s and St. Paul adjustment 5s made the best recovery among railroads, rising a point or more. International Telephone 4½s advanced 1½ points and Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron 6s closed more than 2 points higher than Saturday.

The demand for most rails was nominal and price movement hesitant. Baltimore & Ohio 5s, Canadian Pacific 4½s, Chicago & Great Western 4s, Chicago & Northwestern 3½s, Denver, Rio Grande & Western 5s, Erie 5s, Missouri, Kansas & Texas 5s and Pennsylvania 6½s gained about ½ point each. International Great Northern 5s soared 3 points.

A better inquiry developed for some utility and industrials, but was partially offset by the downward trend of others in these groups. The averages showed utilities made the only gain of the day. Pennsylvania Bell Telephone 5s, Columbia Gas & Electric 5s, Public Service Electric & Gas 4½s, appreciated moderately. Denver Gas & Electric stamped 5s lost 5 points.

The majority of the active foreign bonds turned upward as trading in the group broadened. Bolivian government issues which turned down sharply last week with reports of revolutionary activities in the Latin American country, rallied sharply to gain 2 to 4 points. Argentine and Chilean issues eased. Belgium 7s, with a gain of nearly a point, was the strongest of the European government group. A large turnover took place in German 5½s with some sold at a premium of ⅛ for the first time in several days.

United States Government bonds and Treasury certificates were active and firm. Liberty Fourth 4¼s were heavily accumulated with a slight advance.

New offerings for tomorrow include Midland Natural Gas Co. $2,500,000 6 per cent gold debentures, and Central Illinois Public Service Co. $3,100,000 5 per cent first mortgage bonds.

WASHINGTON BANK CLEARINGS CLIMB

$116,280,346 During June Shows $3,225,309 Gain Over May Total.

RETAIL SALES ADVANCE

BY THOMAS M. CAHILL.

June clearings of Washington banks aggregated $116,280,346.27 as against $124,028,347.42 in the month last year and $113,055,037.21 in May of this year, the report of Manager Charles E. Bright, of the Washington Clearing House Association, revealed yesterady.

Clearings for the first half of the year amount to $676,250,208.88 in comparison with a total of $751,047,847.18 in the corresponding period a year ago, marking a decrease of $74,797,638.30. Thus far this year, local bank clearings have shown declines for each month in comparison with the same months in 1929.

Retail sales in Washington in May were 3 per cent ahead of the month a year ago and department store sales in May for the country as a whole were 2 per cent lower than the month last year, according to the report of the Federal Reserve Board. Department store sales in this city from January 1 to May 31 were the same as in 1929, the report showed.

Sees Revival in 1931.

The recent disappointing behavior of business, commodity prices and stock prices has made more uncertain the prospect for an important recovery in the autumn of the current year, but has made still more certain the prospect for important and sustained revival in 1931, according to the Standard Statistics Co. of New York, which continues in part:

"We still maintain the position 1931 is to be a relatively good business year. We believe that business recovery will be strikingly in evidence by next spring, and that the main trend of activity for the year as a whole will be upward.

"The current low level of productive activity, and the prospective low level of activity during nearby future months, are certain to create moderate deficits of goods which must later be filled. This forecasts some bulge in production and sales volumes in the autumn. Unless agricultural prices improve, however, this bulge now seems likely to be moderate in degree.

New G. M.-P. Murphy Aid.

G. M.-P. Murphy & Co. announce that Warwick Montgomery has become a member of their Washington offices. Mr. Montgomery is well known here, having been born and raised in Washington. For eight years, he was in the real estate business, specializing in investments and management of trust funds. In the spring of 1929, he entered the brokerage business with Harriss & Vose. He will be located in the downtown office of the company at 1510 H street northwest.

The board of directors of the John H. Wilkins Co., coffee merchants, have declared the regular semi-annual dividend of $4 per share on the outstanding preferred stock, and a dividend of $1.50 per share on the outstanding common stock, both dividends payable July 10.

AL CAPONE ENLISTS LAWYERS TO FIGHT FEDERAL TAX QUIZ

Small Army of Treasury Men in Chicago to Check Gang Chief's Books.

CHIEFTAINS' ATTORNEYS HERE TO MAKE AMENDS

Government to Proceed as It Did in Case of Younger Capone, Sent to Prison.

Scarface Al Capone has employed attorneys to make a fight to save him from the sleuths of the income tax division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, now conducting a thorough investigation of his financial affairs back as far as 1922.

Recently his brother, Ralph J. Capone, was tried and convicted on a charge of attempting to defraud the United States out of income taxes, and is now under sentence to serve three years in the penitentiary, and to pay a fine of $10,000.

Efforts to compromise tax differences between Al and the Government have been made, but the Government is not seeking such an adjustment. It will proceed as it did in the case of the younger Capone, who was found to be worth $2,000,000 and to have failed to make proper returns. A small army of Treasury agents, it was reported from Chicago yesterday, are checking on the Capone bank accounts and property holdings.

President Hoover gave the campaign against the Capones and others of this kind a great impetus April 29, when he announced that the Federal Government would join the movement to rid Chicago, New York and other populous communities of money-making gangs who killed if necessary to reach their goals. At the time he referred to the fact that Ralph Capone had been brought to terms by expert intelligence officers of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The Ralph Capone case is the model for others that will be brought into the open in a short while.

Within the last four weeks representatives of a half dozen or more gang leaders have been here to consult attorneys with a view to making amends to the Treasury Department. Feelers, looking to amicable adjustments, have been thrown out, but the gangsters were given to understand that the Government would follow the regular procedure, render a bill and prosecute.

A report that Al Capone had spent several days here last week in an effort to satisfy the Government was denied, but it was stated that he had sent agents to Washington to guard his interests.

ROVER AID REFUSES TO PRESS CHARGES BY STOOL PIGEONS

Hart Follows Out Policy of Ignoring Liquor Information.

WOMAN, MAN BENEFIT BY PROSECUTOR'S ACT

Attorney for Accused Cites Similarity of Warrants in Two Cases.

Following out his announced policy of ignoring information furnished by stool pigeons wherever possible, Assistant United States Attorney David A. Hart yesterday refused to issue papers charging a liquor law violation against May Spicer and John Schrader, both of New York avenue northeast near First street.

Mr. Hart's action followed presentation to him by Attorney John P. Mullen of the fact that the woman had been arrested twice in one week on warrants sworn to by the same informer.

Attorney Mullen told Mr. Hart that the woman was arrested on June 21 and again Saturday on warrants sworn to by J. M. Burke, who, on each occasion, charged that he had bought home brew from her. In each of the warrants which were sworn to before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage the woman was described as Jane Doe and was given a different age and a different weight and height.

The woman is now under $500 bond charged with possession as a result of her arrest on the previous Saturday. She and Schrader, however, were released from all charges in connection with the raid last Saturday. In each instance prohibition agents executed the warrant.

Two Women Indicted.

Martha Louise Russell and Lillian E. Walsh, two young white women, were indicted on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Fillmore Ray, jr., Negro, last April 26.

The two women are alleged to have driven their automobile into the bicycle ridden by the colored youth, causing him to fall into the Georgetown canal and drown. The two girls were ordered held for grand jury action by the coroner's jury.

At the time of the accident Miss Walsh girl gave her address as Fifteenth street northwest near L street, while the Russell girl designated her abode as D street northeast near Second street.

Conspiracy to use the mails to defraud is charged in three indictments. Garfinkle in their operations.

William H. Olmstead was indicted on a charge of violating the national bankruptcy act. Olmstead, according to the indictment, was adjudicated a bankrupt on March 28, 1928. The indictment sets out that Attorney Charles E. Ford was named trustee in bankruptcy and that Olmstead concealed from him assets valued at more than $7,000.

Lawrence M. Hurdle, former cashier in the office of the superintendent of documents at the Government Printing Office, was indicted twice.

In one indictment he is charged with embezzling $199 while in the other he is charged with putting in false vouchers.

TRUSTEE OF SMITH PROPERTY CHANGED

Justice Wheat Denies Plea of Bondholders for Receivership.

NOT NEEDED, HE HOLDS

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, in District of Columbia Supreme Court, yesterday named the American Security & Trust Co. as substitute trustee, registrar and depository under mortgage bonds secured by three buildings financed by the F. H. Smith Co. At the same time the chief justice refused to appoint a receiver for the same building as asked by bondholders.

Buildings affected by the decision naming the substitute trustee are: The Hamilton Hotel, the Cavalier Apartments and the Fremont Apartments.

In his opinion refusing to name receivers in the suits for receivership brought by the bondholders, the chief justice declared that the appointment of a new trustee for the buildings in question made it unnecessary to appoint a receiver. The bondholders who sought the receivership owned only a small percentage of the bonds on the respective buildings.

In the substitute trustee suits Henry H. Maddux as president of the respective subsidiary corporations controling the buildings, named the Smith company, G. Bryan Pitts, former chairman of the board of directors of the latter organization, and the Columbia Title & Registrar Co. as defendants. He asked that the Smith company be removed as depository and that the trustee under the bond issues on each of the buildings be changed.

Attorneys O'Brien & O'Brien appeared for the plaintiffs in each of the trustee actions while the Smith company was represented by Attorneys Wilton J. Lambert, R. H. Yeatman and Frank G. Reichle.

INJURED AIR PILOT FIGHTING FOR LIFE

Burial Planned for Friend as Edward Yeatman Battles Death.

PLANE CRASHED SUNDAY

Suffering a fractured skull, internal injuries and an amputated leg, Edward Yeatman, youthful Lyon Park (Va.) pilot, was fighting gamely for his life in Garfield Hospital yesterday while funeral arrangements went forward for William Wilfred Kerr, who was killed when Mr. Yeatman's plane fell near College Park, Md., Sunday.

Mr. Kerr, an airplane salesman, living at 1425 Rhode Island avenue northwest, is said to have jocularly remarked that "after the flight you might need a basket to take me home." Less than 30 minutes after he climbed into the plane with Mr. Yeatman Sunday afternoon the machine went into a spin and crashed near the College Park Airport. Mr. Kerr died shortly after reaching Providence Hospital. He was 30 years old, and was married.

Hospital attaches entertained little hope for Mr. Yeatman, although they conceded him a chance to survive his injuries. He had received his private pilot's license only last week.

Jess Lankford, of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Department of Commerce, was investigating the accident yesterday. The plane piloted by Mr. Yeatman was owned by George Babcock, manager of the College Park Airport. It was said to have been in perfect condition.

CHILDREN'S SLAYER ADJUDGED INSANE

Pumphrey Sentenced to St. Elizabeths After Court Hearing.

MURDER CHARGE PENDS

Albert Thomas Pumphrey, 38-year-old baker, who shot his two children to death last December, was sent to St. Elizabeths Hospital yesterday after a jury in District of Columbia Supreme Court had adjudged him insane.

Pumphrey was under indictment for first degree murder in connection with the death of each of the children. While the finding of the jury automatically stays the prosecution of the murder charges it is not believed that the indictments will be nolle prossed for some time. The Government, which was represented in the case by Assistant United States Attorney Irving Goldstein, did not oppose the commitment of the man to the lunacy asylum.

Pumphrey killed the two children at his mother's home on B street near Twelfth street northeast, shooting each. The slaying is said to have followed a marital rift, and came a day or two before a motion for the custody of the children was to be argued in Equity Court.

Attorney James J. Reilly, who represented Pumphrey, presented to the court testimony of a number of alienists that his client was insane. These included Drs. D. Percy Hickling, J. E. Lind, Ben Karpman and T. W. Brockbank. Each testified that Pumphrey was suffering from delusions incident to a malignant form of dementia.

Immediately after the jury found its verdict Justice Jesse C. Adkins sentenced the man to the criminally insane ward at St. Elizabeths.

City Model Plane Winner in Detroit

Young Pendleton Hopes to Score Victory at National Meet.

John R. Pendleton, jr., the District of Columbia Air Legion's delegate to national plane model contests in Detroit, has arrived in the Michigan city and is determined to return with a trophy.

In a letter forwarded to T. J. Waggy, of the Air Legion yesterday, young Pendleton described his trip to Detroit in a Clifford Ball Line plane as one that he will never forget. "Gee," he wrote, "I never believed that our country could look so beautiful. It makes you proud to be an American. The first thing that struck my mind after we took off from Washington was the fact that height apparently does away with all the imperfections in landscape, making the world look like a billionaire's garden, taken care of by a thousand gardeners."

After expressing appreciation for the trip, the lad wrote: "If it is in me to beat any of these champions from other cities in anything at all you may be sure that I will bring back some sort of trophy to Washington."

Keys to Office Building Abandoned by Robbers

Two master keys to offices in the Munsey Building, stolen Sunday night from an elevator operator in the building, were found early yesterday morning near the entrance. Two men who robbed the operator of the keys at the point of a pistol are thought to have sought entrance to offices of Wilton J. Lambert, prominent attorney.

The hold-up men are thought to have abandoned the keys in flight. They specifically demanded keys to the lawyer's office. The operator, who was hit in the face as well as robbed, was not seriously hurt.

Tetanus Claims Gun Wound Victim

Mt. Rainier Youth Expires After Ignoring Hurt to His Hand.

About ten days ago, while DeWyane McCallum, 15 years old, of Mount Rainier, Md., was cleaning an old revolver, the weapon exploded, scratching his hand. He neglected the tiny wound, and last night he died at Providence Hospital of tetanus, which set in after the abrasion.

The boy received the old pistol in exchange for his shiny, new air-rifle. A blank cartridge, unknown to the lad, was in the gun. Fumbling with it in an attempt to clean it the gun exploded. He wrapped a handkerchief about the hand and when his family inquired about the handkerchief, the lad evaded their questions.

Last week, however, he told his mother he thought he must be getting the mumps. The family doctor found symptoms of tetanus, or "lockjaw." Sunday, his condition grave, he was admitted to Providence Hospital.

Girl Swimmer Saved By Officer of Library

A story of a rescue from drowning was revealed yesterday when Hugo Hespen, assistant chief of a division at the Library of Congress, admitted that he had helped to safety Miss Marjorie Bowman, 20-year-old daughter of Representative and Mrs. Bowman, of West Virginia, when she was swimming in the South River last Friday.

Hespen deprecated his achievement. "It was nothing at all," he said. But it was known that Miss Bowman, swimming with a party including the young rescuer, had called for help and that Hespen swam out to her and helped her ashore. Miss Bowman has recently been employed in the same office with young Hespen.

Report Justifies Fugitive Slaying

Policeman Cleared by Stoll in Fatal Shooting of Purse Snatcher.

The fatal shooting of Edward Little, colored, 18 years old, of Four-and-a-Half street near I street southwest, early yesterday morning by Private L. D. Peyton, of the Fourth Precinct Station, was called justified in a report submitted to Maj. Pratt yesterday by Inspector Louis J. Stoll. Little was shot while fleeing from the spot where a colored man had snatched a woman's pocketbook.

The man was identified by the owner of the pocketbook as the man who took it shortly before Little died at Emergency Hospital. The pocketbook was recovered near where the man fell.

Peyton is being detained at the station house. He was neither suspended nor arrested. He said that he did not see the robbery, but heard a woman scream and saw the colored youth running away. Not knowing how badly the woman might be hurt, he shot to stop the fugitive. An inquest on Little will be held today.

Daily O'Currences

By JOHN DALY

LUELLA came bounding through the doorway—a bevy of bundles in her arms.

"Wait'll you see what I've got for you!" she shouted, in glee.

Hastily, I tried to figure out what it was, my birthday, or the paying off of the mortgage on the old manse.

"What're we celebrating?" I asked, the Battle of the Boiling Waters?"

Luella laid down her packages, selected a long, slender box.

"Don't be silly," she said, "I just had an inspiration."

"You must-a been mentioned in somebody's will, too," I mused, eyeing the layout.

• • • •

WHEN Luella goes shopping she doesn't stop to figure costs.

"Yes, sir," she said, and could hardly hold back her enthusiasm, "I was inspired."

Nervously, her fingers worked over the package, untying the string, unfolding the wrapper. Finally, she drew forth a necktie—a beauty, too!

"How's that suit you?" she asked, rushing over to me, putting it under my chin.

"It's a peach," I acknowledged. "What did they have—a sale?"

For a moment she was downcast; but I apologized.

"I didn't mean that, Luella, but, you know, getting a necktie when it isn't Christmas——"

"It's just an idea of mine," she said. "I want you to put it on, with a good-looking collar, and when you do you'll be the best-dressed man in town."

HA, ha! I had to laugh. Even I know when they're kidding me. The best-dressed man in town, not even well dressed.

"You know I don't go in for clothes, Leulla. I'm no fashion plate. Look at this old suit."

"That's just it," she explained, "that old suit will do the trick——"

Another laugh. "This old suit hasn't another trick left in it. Why——"

"I know," she recalled, "you had it before we were married——"

"And that hat, there on the table. Say——"

"You had that when you were a boy, didn't you?"

"How did you know?"

"Your mother told me so."

• • • •

SOME truth in that—and here Luella hands me a necktie, tells me to wear it and be the best-dressed man in town.

"How do you figure that out?" I asked.

"Here, I'll prove it to you," she said, went to her desk where she keeps a perfect filing system: "You know, of course, who Baron de Meyer is?"

Never heard of him.

"He's the international style expert——"

"Yeah?"

"And he says that an old suit, a battered hat, a perfect tie and a good collar make a well-dressed man."

If there's any truth in that, then, I'm all set.
